WORLD SPECULATES UPON CONTENTS OF EXPLORERS' DIARY

Learn Balloonists Had Travelled 117 Miles On Foot

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 25.—The interest and curiosity of a thrilled world was focused today on a few brittle sheets of note paper that formed the diary of ill-starred Salomon August Andree and his two companions, courageous martyrs of exploration who perished in 1897 after making a gallant attempt to cross the top of the world in a balloon.

As the sealing vessel Brattvaag, carrying the bodies of the polar trio as well as Dr. Gunnar Horn and his party of explorers who made the discovery, fought its way

BOWERSVILLE MAN ESCAPES WITH CUTS AS TRAIN HITS AUTO

Charles Cline, 47, Bowersville, considered himself lucky Monday morning.

His automobile was struck by a fast west-bound Pennsylvania passenger train at the dangerous Jamestown Pike crossing one mile east of Xenia, but he lived to tell the story.

Cline escaped with minor cuts, two on the head, one on the arm and one on the side, which were dressed at the office of Dr. W. A. Galloway, Pennsylvania Railway surgeon. His automobile was demolished.

"I was driving east going home from Xenia and when I saw the train I put on the brakes, but my car skidded onto the tracks and whirled, facing the train," said Cline after his injuries were dressed.

"I straightened out the car but

FIND BODIES OF BALLOONISTS WHO SOUGHT POLE

Finding the frozen body of Solomon August Andree, inset, with that of an unidentified comrade, at a camp at Victoria Island, Franz Josef Land, a Norwegian fishing vessel, recalls the first attempted aerial expedition to the north pole, thirty-three years ago. Andree set out in the above balloon from Spitzbergen for Alaska via the north pole. With the bodies, which were in a good state of preservation, was found Andree's diary, which is expected to reveal the adventures and privations of the pioneer balloonists. Photo shows balloon being repaired at Spitzbergen prior to start.

SCHNEIDER SETS NEW RECORD FOR FLIGHT

NURSE IS HEROINE

CLEVELAND, Aug. 25.—Mrs. Edith Campbell, nurse at Lakeside Hospital, was hailed a heroine today, following her daring rescue of a crippled child from probable death at the hospital yesterday when a heavy concrete ceiling cracked and fell.

Seeing the ceiling cracking, Mrs. Campbell rushed to the cot where the child lay and carried him away just as the bed was showered with plaster and pieces of concrete. She also aided three other children on wheelchairs to escape as large pieces of the ceiling fell to the floor.

Youth Returns East To Break Round-Trip Mark

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Aug. 25.—"Hell, pop, I made it."

That was the greeting to his father by happy Eddie Schneider, who today holds the coast-to-coast round trip junior flight record, as he ended the final leg of his trip.

The 18-year-old pilot landed here Sunday after 4 p. m., as a crowd of 2,000 cheered. He completed the flight from Los Angeles in twenty-seven hours, nineteen minutes and made a roundtrip record of fifty-seven hours, having flown from east to west in twenty-nine hours and forty-one minutes.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH VERDICT RETURNED IN COLLISION CASE

Coroner Discovers Cause; Voller Will Recover

Accidental death was the verdict returned by Coroner R. L. Haines, Jamestown, following his investigation into the tragic auto accident early Saturday afternoon on the Jamestown Pike which claimed the lives of Mrs. Mary Louise Voller, of Chillicothe, and her 3-year-old son, John William.

J. W. Voller, husband of Mrs. Voller, remains in a serious condition at McClellan Hospital but is expected to recover. He sustained a broken left shoulder, broken pelvis, fractured right ribs and abdominal injuries.

His record broke by one hour and thirty-six minutes the round-trip time of Frank Goldsborough, the boy flyer who was killed when his plane crashed in Vermont.

Bucking strong winds, Schneider flew from Columbus to New York in a single day. He was not tired, he said, but hungry, having gone without food on the entire last leg of his trip.

Young Schneider said he was impressed with the vast wastes in the west where he flew for more than 100 miles without sighting signs of habitation. He also was surprised, he said, at the large number of air hitch-hikers. He refused rides to scores.

The young pilot brought with him a letter from the mayor of Los Angeles to Mayor Walker of New York and one to Mayor Hague of Jersey City, Schneider's home town.

G. A. R. GATHERS FOR MEETING

CINCINNATI, O., Aug. 25.—Ag members of the Grand Army of the Republic were gathered here today to participate in their sixty-fourth annual encampment.

At the opening of the encampment yesterday, thousands of Cincinnatians witnessed the flag-raising ceremony and the booming of a 21-gun salute to the memory of the "boys" who lost their lives in the Civil War and those who have died since.

Trees were dedicated, flags were presented, medals were bestowed, and many speeches eulogized the "boys" now old and feeble, who gallantly tramped off to war in '61.

Many Negroes dotted the huge crowd which had gathered to pay homage to the men who helped to emancipate them.

The five-day encampment will culminate next Friday with a steamer pilgrimage to the birthplace of General U. S. Grant, at Point Pleasant, Ohio.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 25.—Police were searching today for a well-dressed gunman who held up eight customers and the night clerk at a restaurant here last night, and escaped after rifling the pockets of the diners and taking $50 from the cash register.

CHARLES FRALEY IS SOUGHT; VICTIM IS SEVERELY WOUNDED

John Corrigan Made Target Of Enraged Veteran Sunday

Charles Fraley, 45, of Grape Grove, five miles east of Jamestown, wanted in connection with the shooting at 5 p. m. Sunday of John Corrigan, 46, farm laborer, who is reported in a serious condition at St. Elizabeth Hospital, Dayton, with 300 bird shot imbedded in his body, was the object of an intensive manhunt conducted by county authorities Sunday night and early Monday.

Corrigan, who resides with his three children, on the farm of William Taylor on the Paulin Road, four and a half miles northeast of Jamestown, was shot twice with a shotgun while standing in his front yard.

Sheriff Ohmer Tate was advised that Fraley drove up in front of Corrigan's home and without alighting from the machine, called the latter out in the yard. Corrigan went to the front gate, about twenty-five feet from the car. Fraley is said to have asked Corrigan for a drink and when the latter replied, "I ain't got any," Fraley is alleged to have declared, "I'll just shoot you then." Whereupon it is claimed he fired twice with the shotgun, the first charge striking Corrigan in the legs and the second in the back as he turned to escape.

Fraley then drove away. The sheriff was told, Corrigan's son notified William Taylor who summoned Dr. L. V. Haines, Jamestown. Dr. Haines ordered Corrigan removed to the Dayton hospital in an ambulance of F. E. Burr, Jamestown funeral director. Dr. Haines announced that about 300 shot

BANDITS KILL PARTY GUEST

Two Gunmen Wounded In Hold-Up

CLEVELAND, Aug. 25.—Miller Wilkinson, 23, of Cleveland Heights, senior at Princeton University, was shot and killed and two gunmen were wounded in a gun battle here today when five robbers, armed with pistols and rifles, attempted to hold up guests at a party held at the home of Ray S. Dunham, realtor, in Cleveland Heights.

Wilkinson, shot in the forehead with a bullet from a .45-70 rifle died a short time after the gun battle in St. Luke's Hospital.

The robbers who were the victims of bullets fired by police who arrived on the scene during a pitched battle between the guests and the holdup men, were Angelo Bell, 20, and his brother, Mike, 16, both of Cleveland, according to police. Angelo was shot in the right leg and Mike in the right arm.

DAYLIGHT BANDITS ROB JEWELRY STORE

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 25.—In one of the most daring daylight hold-ups on record here, three armed bandits today entered the Guda jewelry store shortly after the doors were opened, cowed the proprietor and his assistant with drawn guns and made their escape with jewelry worth $2,000 and $300 in cash.

H. W. Montgomery, manager, was removing two trays of rings and cash from the office safe when the trio entered. Montgomery and A. Mallen, the assistant, were held at bay while the bandits looted the safe and tray.

Their getaway was made in an automobile which had been parked nearby.

GRAF ZEPPELIN IS DAMAGED IN START

BERLIN, Aug. 25.—The German air liner Graf Zeppelin suffered slight damage to her horizontal rudder today in soaring off from Staaken airfield near here, but continued to Friedrichshafen without interruption.

The world-girdling dirigible paused here briefly on a return trip from Koenigsberg to exchange passengers. The minor mishap was the only untoward incident to occur during the pleasure cruise.

PRESIDENT HOOVER HOLDS CONFERENCE WITH PARTY CHIEFS

Senator Fess At Camp; Ohioan Will Speak Over Radio

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—President Hoover held an unannounced conference with his political chiefs at his camp on Virginia's Rapidan River yesterday. He was told about the progress the party has made to date in the forthcoming campaign and the scope of the campaign publicity that will be distributed to the voters through radio broadcasts.

It was learned this morning upon the president's return to the White House, that he had quietly summoned Senator Simon D. Fess, of Ohio, newly appointed chairman of the Republican national committee, and James L. West, chairman of the committee's bureau of publicity, to confer with him at his camp.

Both parties have resorted to the radio as a medium to carry their campaigns to the public, the Democrats opening theirs last Monday with a speech by Jonett Shouse, chairman of the Democratic national executive committee.

Senator Fess speaks tonight at 7 o'clock over the same station, WRC, of the National Broadcasting Company.

YOUTH KILLED AFTER MURDER OF OFFICERS

Enters Crime Career When Jilted By His Sweetheart

ENO, Ont., Aug. 25.—Jilted by his sweetheart, Emmerick Fernet, 20, of Fort Francis, Ont., embarked on a short-lived but sensational career of crime, during which he held up a crack passenger train, murdered two United States immigration inspectors and then lost his own life early today as the result of a wound suffered in a gun battle with officers.

In a death-bed confession, Fernet, who hitherto had been known as a model youth, said his brief but bloody fling at crime followed a misunderstanding with his sweetheart, whom he did not name. Police are searching for the girl for questioning.

"After that nothing mattered," Fernet, his body wracked with the pain of his wound, said. "I wanted to get away from her, from Fort Francis—from everything!"

Young Fernet was fatally wounded by provincial police after he had sought refuge in a farm house and withstood an hour's siege.

The youth struck his first blow at society late Saturday night when he stole an automobile in Fort Francis with the intention of leaving town. Captured by Constable Sidney Wall, he escaped with a handcuff dangling from his wrist and boarded a west bound Canadian National passenger train which was just leaving Fort Francis.

Near Enn, he held up the train crew and locked them in a smoking compartment after relieving them of money and valuables. A shot which he fired through the compartment door, apparently with the intention of frightening his prisoners, awakened Lawrence E. Dalton, of Ranier, Minn., and Lawrence E. Jones, of Warroad, Minn., both United States immigration inspectors who were riding the train to prevent aliens from crossing the border.

The two American officers started toward the smoking compartment. Fernet met them in the narrow aisle and in a brief gun battle shot and killed both men. Leaping across the bodies of the officers, he ran to the head of the train and held up the engineer and fireman and forced them to apply the brakes.

The house was soon surrounded by police and in the ensuing gun battle he was fatally wounded after smoke bombs forced him to leave his shelter.

BLAME GANGSTERS FOR CICERO MURDER

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—Shot through the back of the head and badly beaten, the body of Joseph Terravacca, 44, was found today in front of his home in Cicero, a suburban stronghold of the Capone forces.

Although the dead man was known as a butcher, police believe he was involved in a liquor racket and was slain by gangsters who took him for a "ride" and then returned to hurl the body in the street at his home.

The dead man was clothed only in underwear and the rest of his clothes were not found.

TEMPLE OFFICIALS TARGET OF ASSAULT BY MOTHER KENNEDY

Challenges Board In Lat- est Statement; Aimee Silent

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 25.—Although still confined to her bed in a Brentwood sanitarium, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, mother of Aimee Simple McPherson, noted evangelist, was robust enough to hurl stinging phrases in the direction of Angelus Temple officials, who, she claims, are trying to discredit her daughter and gain control of the temple.

Meanwhile, her daughter is also confined to her bed at her Malibu Beach cottage, where she is reported recovering from a threatened nervous breakdown. She is closely guarded by officers of the temple and has issued no statements since admonishing her mother "to go and talk no more."

That Mrs. Kennedy was still "greatly interested in her daughter and her affairs was evident when she stated that she "would howl the temple down to strict accountability if anything happens to my daughter, either physically, mentally or financially."

The battle between Mrs. Kennedy and her daughter, which was said to have revolved around certain of the evangelist's advisors, came to a head last week.

As the aftermath, Mrs. Kennedy charged that her nose was broken during a fist encounter with her daughter. The evangelist's advisors said Mrs. Kennedy was recovering from a face-lifting operation. Mrs. Kennedy said her daughter was recovering from a similar operation. This was likewise denied.

Mrs. Kennedy appeared to be irked more than a little by the reports issued concerning her daughter's condition. At various times she has been reported near death. These reports, and others which said the evangelist had sought to have an operation to remove excess fat from her legs, were all a part of a plot to discredit Mrs. McPherson, according to her mother.

"For more than three years," said Mrs. Kennedy, "they have been plotting to get the temple away from Aimee. They forced me out, and now they are trying to force her out."

PILSUDSKI WILL BE POLISH DICTATOR

WARSAW, Poland, Aug. 25.—The fast growing lineup of European dictatorships was ready to augment its ranks today with the impressive figure of Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, hitherto Poland's covered mainspring of power, who announced he was ready to cope with all governmental problems following resignation Saturday of Premier Walery Salawek and his cabinet.

Bitter political wrangles are expected when Pilsudski officially announces his leadership. He already has wide opposition since the frank declaration that he reserved for himself decisions in the most important government matters, obviously leaving to the cabinet merely the routine ministerial duties.

STATE FAIR OPENS

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 25.—Visitors from all over the state were flocking into this city today to attend the annual Ohio State Fair which was officially opened this morning.

were lodged in the man's body but that he would recover unless infection set in.

Corigan's three children, Francis, 16, Mary, 13 and Cecilia, 11, were at home at the time. One of the children, who was on the front porch when the shooting occurred, was struck on the foot by a stray shot but the injury was not serious.

Sheriff Tate and L. A. Davis, county road patrolman, scoured the countryside Sunday night and until 1 a. m. Monday in a vain search for the Ford sedan in which Fraley drove away.

Earlier in the day Fraley had had an altercation with James Thompson, owner of the house in which Fraley was living. Sheriff Tate and Officer Davis went to Fraley's home about 10 a. m. and accompanied him to Thompson's residence, where Thompson was arrested brought to Xenia and lodged in the County Jail to await arraignment on a probable charge of pointing firearms or carrying a concealed weapon.

The sheriff said Thompson attempted to draw a .32 caliber revolver as the officers approached but that Davis grabbed his arm before he could remove the weapon from his pocket.

According to a story told the sheriff, when Fraley's wife rented the house from Thompson she misrepresented herself. When Thompson discovered the house had been rented to the Fraleys he objected and had attempted to oust them from the dwelling.

Fraley told the sheriff he was driving along the South Charleston Pike early Sunday and as he went past the home of Roy Jones, he saw Thompson and Jones there together. Jones hailed him and when he stopped Thompson is alleged to have menaced Fraley with his revolver. Jones intervened and held Thompson, giving Fraley an opportunity to drive away, it is said.

Investigation by Sheriff Tate revealed that Fraley later in the day went to a friend's home and purchased a shotgun for $5. It is believed he had been drinking home brew and that he may have been under the influence of liquor when he visited Corigan's home late in the afternoon and when denied a drink, shot the farmer.

Fraley, according to the sheriff, is a World War veteran and has been the recipient of a soldier's relief for a number of years.

REV. DAVID POWERS GIVES FAREWELL TO HIS CONGREGATION

Urging his hearers to remain true to the goal of a new church edifice, the Rev. David Powers, pastor of St. Brigid Catholic Church for the last six years, delivered his farewell to the congregation at Sunday's masses.

The Rev. Father Powers will begin his pastorate at St. Joseph's Church, Dayton, where he was recently transferred, Thursday, and will be succeeded here by the Rev. Lawrence Vessell, present pastor of St. Jerome Church, California, O., who will greet his new parishioners next Sunday.

It was the Rev. Father Powers who inspired the congregation to the ideal of a new church during his pastorate here and he told his listeners Sunday that they stand committed to that program and should carry it through to a successful conclusion. Under his pastorate the Rev. Father Powers not only purchased a new home for the teaching nuns of the parish and financed elaborate repairs, but established a substantial church building fund part of which has been expended in the removal of the rectory to a new location to make way for the church building.

Because of a diocesan order to delay building programs pending the outcome of the depression period, erection of the church, originally scheduled for the coming fall, will not be started then. Financial statements for the period from January 1 to August 1 were distributed by the Rev. Father Powers at services Sunday, and the report included a farewell message from the pastor who was beloved by his congregation and had a host of friends among people not members of his church.

In his written message and in his farewell talks to the congregation, the retiring pastor thanked his parishioners for their loyal support and credited to a generous and faithful laity the successes that have come under his leadership here.

of the Franklin Presbyterian Church, will officiate. Burial will be made in Woodhill Cemetery at Franklin, in which city the Voller family resided for a number of years before going to Chillicothe.

Coroner Haines, who investigated the accident, questioned James Stroud, driver of the car which was in the collision with the Voller auto, and Lawrence Smith and John Haines, state highway department employees, who witnessed the accident. The testimony of Smith and Haines was that Voller, who was driving, apparently applied the brakes too suddenly as the Stroud machine approached at a rather high rate of speed, causing his machine to skid across the road directly into the Stroud auto.

Although a front tire on the Voller auto was found to have blown out, it is believed the blow-out resulted from the force of the impact with the Stroud machine and had nothing to do with causing the accident, as was first thought.

The fatal accident occurred two miles east of Xenia, the Vollers being on their way to Miamisburg, where they had planned to spend the week-end with Mrs. Voller's mother, Mrs. Matilda Hamilton, at the Hamilton Inn.

Mrs. Hamilton came to Xenia Saturday upon being notified of the accident and took the 6-year-old son back to Miamisburg with her.

story that took months to live, months filled with hopes, adventure, suffering, despair and finally perceptible death, mocking the three lone figures from a vast and endless expanse of ice and snow, beckoning to them one by one.

The position on the page would have placed the death party at about 117 nautical miles due west of the camp where they eventually perished, their bodies and equipment to be preserved nearly intact for thirty-three long years.

Apparently, within a week after soaring aloft from Danes Island in Spitzbergen, in an oval-shaped swinging gasbag, Andree and his companions landed safely on the icefields and began a 117-mile trek, dragging their huge supply of food and camping equipment after them on sleds.

From deductions of the spot on White Island where Dr. Horn found the bodies, it was assumed the north pole aspirants finally met a body of open water too formidable to be braved in their collapsible boat and realized suddenly that theirs was a question of rescue by friends or death in the far north. They established their camp, ate polar bear meat, and one by one succumbed to cold and starvation. Andree, it appeared, was last to die.

Ridiculed and jeered by a jesting world when they set out on their adventure thirty-three years ago, their bodies will be brought back to receive the homage of a more sympathetic universe.

Each child at the camp was subjected to a complete physical examination and a chart showing the result of the child's examination will be sent to the parents of the children soon.

According to Mrs. Wittenmyer there was a decided improvement over the condition of the health of the children this year than that of last year and this is due she said to the fact that the children have carried out the health habits suggested to them at the club camp last year.

Girl Who Turned Down Stage For Broadcasting Plays Roles On Air

SINCE 1926 ROSALINE HAS BEEN KNOWN AS THE GIRL WITH "The Perfect Radio Voice"

ROSALINE GREEN

By YANNER ALEXANDER

Central Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—If the chain studies shared the reputed Hollywood attitude of unfriendliness toward contest winners, Rosaline Green would have been either a school teacher or a stage star today instead of the leading lady of broadcast dramatics.

Rosaline lately has filled the chief feminine roles of "Joan of Arc," "Napoleon" and other plays sent over nationwide hookups. Her chief claim to fame, however, still is her possession of "the perfect radio voice," a distinction awarded her a few months prior to her graduation from State College, Albany, N. Y., four years ago.

Refused Stage Offer

Before she, or her voice was given the prize at the Radio World's Fair of 1926, the charming Rosaline had served more than two years of apprenticeship with both the original WGY Players and a legitimate stock company, all the while keeping up with her classes at college. This experience, and the title, led Lee Shubert to offer her the lead in his production of "Pearl of Great Price," but Rosaline had decided that her true vocation was the creation of dramatic roles for radio presentation and declined with thanks.

Her graduation with honor carried with it a license to teach wherever she chose and, her chosen field not having developed to its present dimensions in 1926, Rosaline left teaching pay her expenses while she took a postgraduate course in dramatics at Columbia University.

Then, while she was with a fashionable school on Riverside Drive, she organized her own group of radio players. She wrote, or adapted, the plays, directed them and acted in the finished product. This course of action inevitably led to a chain contract and the assurance that her eminence would continue, full time.

Her Unique Voice

Edward H. Smith of the old WGY, who is generally given credit as the founder of radio drama, was the undoubted discoverer of Rosaline.

Mrs. Mary E. Boolman, 56, lifelong resident of Clifton, was found dead in bed early Monday morning by her granddaughter, Helen Boolman, who called at the residence where her grandmother lived alone. Victim of a sudden heart attack, she is believed to have succumbed between 6 and 9 o'clock Sunday night.

Mrs. Boolman was born February 15, 1844 in Clifton. She leaves three children, Mrs. Edna Gram and Lewis Boolman, both of Springfield, and I. W. Boolman, Clifton; two step-sons, Harry Boolman, Rossburg, O., and Frank Boolman, Indianapolis, Ind., and ten grandchildren. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Star Gazing

By RADIE HARRIS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Aug. 19.—Introducing Lucile and Jimmie Gleason's finest attraction of their entire career. Produced Feb. 6, 1908, at Portland, Oregon. Entitled "Russell."

Made a noise like an actor at age of three months. Played title role in "The Hair to the Hairs." Was a "howling" success.

Childhood ambition was to be a postman, fireman and policeman, so that he could ride-free on street cars. Is no relation to Harry Lauder.

Attended University of California for purpose of winning an L. and S. (Leisure and Sleep) degree. Came to Hollywood to spend Summer with his family. Was offered role in "The Shady Lady." The University of California has been struggling along without him ever since.

Likes Irish wolfhounds, Donald Ogden Stewart, caviar, San Francisco, track meets, Mrs. Irving Berlin, Russian food, Dorothy Parker, intellectual outdoor women, surprising people with presents, and Jimmie Durante.

HATES BASEBALL.

Hates trite phrases, lary performances, picture premieres, living on schedule, the country, baseball, ice water and cocoanut cake and candy.

Has a bulldog named "Puffing Billy" in honor of the first locomotive ever built. Christened him after sleeping with him in the same room all night.

Draws $10 a week spending money from his weekly salary check. The rest is banked away by his business agent. When he runs low, generally "touches" the "old man," who receives $25.

Only time he ever gets embarrassed is when he talks to Gloria Swanson.

Would like to play "Merton of the Movies" and "Cryano de Bergerac." And knows he never will.

Has a picture of his grandmother when she played the lead in "Shenandoah" at the age of 15, and an old playbill of his first appearance on the stage with his mother, father, grandmother and grandfather included in the cast, which he would grab first in case of fire in his home.

NO BRIDGE-FIEND

Can't play bridge. Doesn't particularly enjoy dancing. And loathes wisecracking. Is on every hostess' list in Hollywood.

Gets a new expression every day. Current one is describing everyone and everything as "dim-mal."

Inherits all the superstitions of a theatrical family. Lack cats.

RUSSELL GLEASON

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

ETERNAL RECOGNITION—Whoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven. But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven.—Matthew 10:32, 33.

ARGENTINA

A former chancellor of the Argentine embassy in Washington predicts at Williamstown that "Argentina will withdraw from the Pan-American union as soon as the new generation gets the reins of government in its hands—and perhaps before." This would be unfortunate; but color is given to the prediction by the recent trend in Argentina's foreign policy. Argentina withdrew from the League of Nations in 1920 and has since refused to reconsider her action, although the league assembly unanimously invited her in 1928 to do so. She has a flair for being a lone row.

When Argentina associated herself with Brazil and Chile to extricate Woodrow Wilson from the mess into which the seizure of Vera Cruz in 1914 had precipitated him, a hope was expressed that she was about to abandon her policy of isolation. This hope appears in the light of subsequent events to have been premature. The reception accorded to Mr. Hoover on his pre-inaugural goodwill tour was nowhere else so reserved as in Argentina. The coolness thus displayed toward the United States is to be explained on more than one ground. Argentina's exports are still chiefly agricultural. They were adversely affected by the tariff of 1922. The predominant strains in the population of Argentina are Spanish and Italian. They have been strengthened in the past three-quarters of a century by some 6,000,000 immigrants, very largely from Italy and Spain. Culturally Anglo-Saxons and the Latin peoples are different.

A third reason for the rift in sentiment between Argentina and the United States is the relatively small part our capital has played in developing the second largest republic in South America. Virtually all of the privately owned railways in Argentina are controlled by British companies. About half of the $3,150,000,000 of foreign capital invested in Argentina in 1928 was British, about a sixth of it was American. Our rivals have thus gained a predominant foothold in Argentine trade, which they are loath to surrender, and which there is evidence they have not hesitated to buttress by anti-American propaganda based on the effects of our tariff and even on racial difference.

The withdrawal of Argentina from the Pan-American union, as a protest against what she is represented to believe is an unnecessarily selfish policy of the United States in Central and South America and the Caribbean, would not benefit her in the slightest. She would merely lose the support of this association of sister republics in restraining the "Colossus of the North." The Pan-American union has done much to promote peace and understanding, arbitration and conciliation, as well as trade, among its members. Above all it has heretofore recognized and proclaimed the solidarity of the republics of the two Americas vis-a-vis the old world. Any defection from its ranks would be regrettable. The defection of a country of 1,150,000 square miles and a population of 11,000,000 enterprising and industrious people would be particularly so.

The WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

TALK

Somebody has said: "Never shift your mouth into high gear until you are sure your brain is turning over." There is a great deal of shifting the gears into high when the engine isn't really working. Supposing none of us ever said anything until we had something to say, what a silent world it would be.

LEARNING

"For a better understanding of the unfolding life of man we lay this cornerstone." In these words the great archeologist, Breasted, of the University of Chicago, commemorated the beginning of the Oriental Institute, a part of the university. Researches tirelessly carried on by Breasted and others have immensely expanded the knowledge of man through a study of his remote ancestors.

LANGUAGE

John Erskine, educator, author, pianist, tells us "America is the only country left where we teach languages so that no pupil can speak them. It is the only country where you cannot tell by the way a college graduate speaks and writes whether he is educated or not." Language can be made more than a thing of use. It can be made a thing of beauty. The English language is the finest instrument for the communication of ideas ever devised in the history of the human race. English is richer in words and possibilities than any other tongue. Frank Collins Spillman, super-salesman, says that most of this thing we call personality is on the tip of the tongue. Know how to speak, and how to use language to make it work for you beautifully and effectively, and walls fall down before you.

SPARE TIME AGAIN

Much has been said in this column about the wise use of spare time that so often makes smooth the road to success. The original sketch of the great dirigible, R-100, which recently broke the record crossing the Atlantic, was made on the back of a menu card while the designer was at a dinner party. Sir Dennistoun Burney, director of the company which built it, has a mind that works wherever he happens to be.

THINKING ABOUT IT

A man famed for a great achievement was once asked how he has succeeded so well. "By always thinking about it," he replied. Most of us let our minds run along in lazy reverie and fondly imagine we are thinking.

MOVING OUT; FLYING IN

Far-seeing young men, married and looking for a home, may do well to consider property a hundred miles from town. It won't be more than five years before suburbs are a hundred miles away, from which commuters come daily to the city by air. Air transit for the general public is not far distant. And there are some nice building lots—and cheap—only a hundred miles out.

HEALTHIER

Insurance statistics prove that American wage earners are healthier than they were a year ago. Death from tuberculosis has gone from 95 to 100,000 of the population to a little more than 85. The diphtheria death rate has dropped 27 percent and there are fewer deaths from cancer. That's a wonderful record for this fast age in which we live or try to live. Unfortunately deaths from heart trouble, brought on by the strenuous pace of life, still make lots of news.

Mothers of Presidents
What state is noted as the home of the presidents?
Virginia has furnished the nation eight presidents. Ohio is second with seven.

Antiques
I have some antiques for sale. How can I determine the value of them?

There is no standard scale of values for antiques. Age, period, condition, kind of wood, carving and many other factors have bearing upon their value. Supply and demand also play a leading part in their price and sale. New York City is the leading market, but it would be impossible to have your furniture appraised by a New York dealer unless you shipped it there.

Populous Chinese
How many Chinese are there on earth and when was the last census taken in China?
There are approximately 600,000,000 Chinese on earth. The only reliable statistics ever taken on China's population were compiled in 1402 and 1403 by the emperor. The increase in this one year amounted to 19 per cent.

Coins
What was the highest price ever paid for a rare coin?
A $5 gold piece from the George Alfred Lawrence collection sold at auction in New York City in 1929, brought $7,900. The coin was issued in California in 1849, during the "gold fever" period.

(NOTE: The following pamphlets may be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin and a large stamped, self-addressed envelope for each, to Central Press Bureau, P. O. Box 126, Washington, D. Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK.—"Some years ago," said The Old Stage Manager, "a fellow came to me who was starving. Kicked out of his room. Feet on the ground. I hooked him up with a road company at $75 a week and sold him a hundred advance. He told me with tears in his eyes he'd never forget it."

"The whirligig of time reversed our positions. He's on the crest of the wave today and I'm in the trough of the sea. Got a job with a Broadway hit that'll keep him well heeled for at least two years. I went back-stage the other night and asked him for $15. Room rent. He turned me down."

I saw that The Old Stage Manager got his fifteen bucks. He told me with tears in his eyes he'd never forget it.

As the girl says in the play: "I wonder..."

WHEN BRETHREN MEET

No one should live beyond what he can reasonably expect to borrow. That's the Broadway motto—and in these sad days it's sent most of them scurrying far afield in search of work.

At first, digging deep and finding the last dime gone, they let it be known that they'd accept any honest toll that did not involve too much perspiration. Later, with appetites unsatisfied, they become panic-stricken and less fussy. Two of The Brethren met last week in an Eighth Avenue Coffee Pot frequented by The Fringe. One of them had landed a job in a nearby power house. "It's better than nothing," he remarked philosophically. "And you," he added, "how are things rollin' with you?"

"Me?" said the other erstwhile thespian. "Oh, I'm doblin' in brass." By which indirect, elusive and subtle symbolism he conveyed the intelligence that he was polishing up, as porter, in an adjacent side-wheel hostelry.

IT WON'T BE LONG NOW!

AFTER 37 YEARS IN PUBLIC LIFE SENATOR HEFLIN FACES HANDICAP NOW THAT PARTY DISOWNS HIM

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Senator J. Thomas Heflin of Alabama—better known as plain Tom—also occasionally referred to as Cotton Tom, obviously on account of his home state's most important agricultural product—and by some nicknamed Tomtom, from a fancied resemblance of his oratory to the sound of the primitive musical instrument so called.

Well, anyway, Marse Tom, now in his 62nd year, has held elective office, of one sort or another, almost uninterruptedly since he was not quite 24.

It is true enough that it is no trick for a Democrat, once nominated, to win in Alabama, but it is just as hard to be nominated there as it is to be elected in other parts of the country, where they have inter-party fights.

TOMTOM APPEARS never to have slipped up on a nomination he wanted until this year.

Beginning as mayor of his home town of Lafayette, his political successes accumulated so fast that frequently his jobs overlapped, and he had to resign in the midst of a term, in order to avail himself of higher honors which had ripened for him even sooner than he himself had expected.

Appointive posts, which a man sometimes is boasted into, never seem to have appealed to Cotton Tom.

The kind he evidently preferred (and attained, with such amazing regularity) have been of the type within the gift, directly, of the people—the sort that the aspirant acquires, if at all, by virtue of his own profound understanding of popular psychology.

AFTER NEARLY four decades of this sort of thing, without a setback, it must give Tomtom a decidedly eerie feeling to find himself thrown bodily right out of the Alabama Democratic organization—at almost the end of his current senate term, too—and forced to run for re-election as an independent.

What happened has been told already. Tom, elected Al Smith in 1928. Accordingly, this year, the Alabama Democratic central committee ruled that he no longer is a Democrat and barred him from the party's ticket, for renomination senatorially. John T. Bankhead, brother of Representative William B. Bankhead, of Jasper (Ala.), and a son of John H. Bankhead, whom Tomtom succeeded in the senate, got the nomination.

A real scrap at the polls in November, will be a new thing for Alabama.

Ordinarily, as previously remarked, the excitement is all over as soon as the Democrats have made their nominations; the other folk usually are too weak even to put up a ticket.

Candidate Bankhead will know there has been a fight in the present instance, however.

in the senate and say he simply is impossible—but they forget that it is Alabama he is making those speeches for, and that Alabama's taste in speeches may be different from theirs.

True, it is quite likely there are Alabamians whom Tom humiliates, but Tom is addressing the big bulk of them. As well as I can figure it, they would not have kept on electing him to the legislature, the house of representatives, the senate and other offices for 37 years unless he had their mass likes and dislikes estimated accurately.

There is no denying that an independent candidate is at considerable disadvantage.

The lack of a party machine is an embarrassment.

Generally speaking, this is not a good year for 1928's Al Smith bolters, either.

The North Carolina Democrats took Senator Simmons for a ride because he turned Hoovercrat. They turned him down for a renomination—though he was the oldest member of the United States senate.

On the other hand, Senators Glass of Virginia and Sheppard of Texas, whom the Hoovercrats tried to punish for supporting Al, were gloriously vindicated, both being renominated by big majorities.

Furthermore, Senator Hugo L. Black, Tomtom's own Alabama colleague, passed coldly by on the other side of the street, declining to lend any aid to Tomtom's independent campaign, when Tomtom made overtures to him—although both were endorsed by the Ku Klux Klan the last time they were candidates.

These were unfavorable symptoms for Senator Heflin.

Yet the nominating primary was not so unfavorable to him.

Tomtom's primary fix was not quite like Senator Simmons—in North Carolina.

Senator Simmons was on the ticket and the North Carolina Democratic voters themselves rejected his candidacy—which ended the matter. Tomtom, not being on the Alabama ticket, is in a position to say that the Democratic rank and file wanted him and would have chosen him if the little group on the central committee had let them.

He therefore urged his friends to boycott the primary—in order to feel free to vote for him as an independent.

If the primary vote had been a whopper, the inference would have been that his friends were few—but it was not a whopper; it was a very small vote. Thus Tom is entitled to trust that a lot of folk are lying low—to plunk for him in November.

To summarize: Senator Heflin is a strong candidate—but handicapped. Can he overcome his handicaps?

John T. Bankhead has sought nominations before and always was beaten until his most formidable opponent was hotted—whence it seems fair to guess that he is not so strong. Progressives also find fault with him. But he is at a technical advantage. Will it avail him?

And any election in which the perpetuation or elimination of Tomtom Heflin is the chief issue cannot but be of capital interest to the whole country.

Peter's Adventures

By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent

ONE WAY TO TELL A FRIEND IN THE DARK

THE PASSAGE to the underground nursery was pitch dark, and suddenly Peter's heart skipped a beat. Something brushed his neck, was tickling his ear, stroking his cheek. Wildly Peter hit out with his arms. They touched nothing. Still those long, mysterious fingers trailing themselves over his cheek. At last he could stand it no longer. Peter gave a gasping cry. Busy, a few feet ahead of the boy, turned around.

"What's wrong, young friend? Speak up!" commanded the Worker Ant.

"There's somebody in this passage way besides you and me, Busy!" Peter managed to stammer. "I have an idea someone is trying to clutch me. Don't leave me to his mercy!"

Rather to Peter's surprise the Worker Ant burst out chuckling.

"Of course there's someone in this passage besides you and me. It's Sentinel, of course! Don't be so frightened. No one is trying to hurt you and you're in no danger of falling into any body's clutches. Sentinel is merely reaching out with his long feelers to make certain I was telling the truth—that there are only two of us here. Besides, Sentinel is very sensitive. Her feelers tell her exactly what sort of a fellow you are. If you were an enemy she'd guess it at first touch."

"Well, I never!" Peter, relieved, giggled. "Sentinel's feelers tickled. But what a funny thing for Sentinel to do!"

Now no Ant likes to be criticized and Busy thought Peter was a making mock of Ant customs. Dark as it was, she stopped stock still in her tracks. Peter bumped into her, and was obliged to listen to a little lecture on good manners and Ant customs right then and there.

Make Child Immune From Ills

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

It won't be long now. The golden summer days are going past. They are getting shorter. Every now and then a cool morning blows across your face. There is a hint of fall in the air.

And the play-time days for the children are going past, too. The days of running and romping in the sunshine. The schoolroom looms ahead for them, poor kids. They must go back and sit straight and not whisper and do all the things it is unnatural for them to do. They must do so in order, to use the definition of education given by a great teacher, that "each individual may be inducted into the general experience of the race."

Well, there is no help for it—for their future happiness at least, it is best.

Is there anything to be done to prepare them physically so the ordeal will be a little easier on them?

Of course in many ways children stand ordeal better than we do. They have resiliency, and their strong healthy young bodies bound back to renewed vigor in no time.

But in one respect they are weaker than adults are. They are more susceptible to certain things. Principally to infections and infectious diseases.

You see we old people have lived long enough in the world so that we have acquired an immunity to nearly all the contagious diseases.

You seldom hear of a person over 25 years of age catching scarlet fever or measles or whooping cough or chickenpox or diphtheria. Why is this? Because all these diseases are spread by contact, and by the time a person has lived to the age of 25 or 30 he has been in contact with all these diseases and has developed an immunity.

Sometimes you develop an immunity to disease by actually having an attack of it. When the germ which causes it gets into your body your blood and other tissue juices produce antibodies to the poison of the germ. Then they produce an active poison against the germ which kills it off.

Ever after, whenever you come in contact with that germ, your blood and body juices have been sensitized so that they produce the antibodies and poisons for it immediately. You do not have a second attack. Your body throws off the poison and kills the germ before you have a chance to get sick.

But you do not always have to have a disease in order to acquire an immunity to it. If you meet enough people, get into crowded theaters and street cars where everyone breathes the same air, you are bound to take in a few germs from other people. There may be old, weak germs which your body juices can neutralize and kill off very easily. Even so, you acquire what is called "contact immunity." You do not actually have the disease—say it is diphtheria against which most people acquire contact immunity, but you are protected from it for the rest of your life.

It takes time to do this. You have to live some years in the world.

Children have very little of the contact immunity. They have not had enough contacts with people. And when they are crowded in a schoolroom they are liable to get a good many. Mind you, I think it is a good thing. To keep them away from crowds and from their fellows is to expose them to the same dangers later in life.

But is there any way to protect them from the worst of the dangers of school contacts? From the most serious contagious diseases they can have?

Yes there is. And the carrying out of these procedures is the most important thing that you can do to prepare your child for school. I will describe the essential ones in the following articles this week.

Girl Does Not Like Kisses

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"MY DEAR MISS LEE: I am a daily reader of your column and enjoy it very much. I have been going with a girl a little more than a year my junior. She is 16 and I 17. I have been going with her about three months. I care a great deal for her and she says she likes me pretty well. However, she has never been kissed, and says that she is not going to let a boy kiss her until both are sure that they care a lot for each other.

"In my case she says she does not think I care enough for her, but even though I tell her I care an awful lot for her, she does not think I am sincere. How can I show her that I do care for her? I have not dated another girl since I have been going with her.

"She is the first girl that I have been unable to kiss in at least three dates. I would even like to wager that George, Jr., would be unable to kiss her in half a dozen dates. Of course I could kiss her against her will, but I made her a promise that I would not do that. We both agree that there is nothing wrong in necking if both the boy and girl care enough.

"Dear Miss Lee, I care more for her than for all the other girls I have ever gone with put together, and I believe that I will never know that real happiness for me until she lets me kiss her. Even though she refuses, I greatly admire her spirit in the matter. Your advice would be greatly appreciated. Miss Lee.

"A PERPLEXED LOVER." Your sentence, "I greatly admire her spirit," explains her attraction for you. She has spirit, that girl and I think it is too bad for you to try to break it down. If she gives in, ten to one you won't care for her nearly as much.

I admire her, just as you do. When she DOES kiss a fellow, he will know she really cares for him and her kisses will be worth having. Respect her wishes, son. She wouldn't go with you exclusively if she didn't like you.

PERPLEXED JOAN: You say you do not have many boy friends and then tell of two who like you. If the second boy has definitely broken with his girl it would be all right to continue to go with him, but don't take him from her. It wouldn't be fair.

POOR POLLY: Why don't you speak to the boy, as long as you know one another, and smile at him? It is your place to speak first, you know. You will get over your bashfulness as you grow older, and, in the meantime, try to think that you make other acts feel uncomfortable when you act shy, and try to set them at ease. This attitude will, in time, I think, lead you to forget yourself and cease to be bashful.

Get Permanent Before Bleaching

By GLADYS GLAD

WITH THE advent of summer, permanent waves become as numerous as the waves of the sea. Since hats are worn less frequently during this season, the coiffure must always look presentable.

The average woman seems to think that a permanent wave will make her hair beautiful, regardless of its condition of health. This is not true. In fact, if the hair is in a poor condition, the permanent waving process may make it worse. See that your hair is gloriously healthy before you go for your permanent wave.

It is most difficult to administer a satisfactory permanent wave over hair that has been bleached or dyed. If you intend to get a permanent wave, and also wish to change the color of your hair, by all means obtain the wave first, and pluck out the undesirable hairs. After plucking, apply witch hazel to close the pores.

Superfluous Hair

Disgusted: The hair can be permanently removed from your upper lip by expert manipulation of the electric needle. The work should be done by an expert, for good results.

EDITOR'S NOTE: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer beauty questions by mail, she will be happy to send you her pamphlets on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture" if you will write her, care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope and 10 cents in coin, for each, to cover cost of printing and mailing. Personal questions on beauty will be answered through Miss Glad's daily column.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Easy Way to Wash Windows
The easiest way is the best, as far as washing windows is concerned. In order to keep the glass panes clean and shining, household experts recommend a solution made by adding a little kerosene to a thick soap paste. This should be applied to the windows with a clean cloth or sponge and then rinsed away with clear, hot water. A small rubber hose is convenient for rinsing the exteriors.

Squeegees help to dry the windows and to prevent squeaking. The long-haired variety saves unnecessary bending and reaching. To add a final polish to the windows rub them thoroughly with old newspapers or a clean piece of chambray.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED
by Phil

The Krippendorff-Dittman Co. softball team, title winner in the American League, has, as the old saying goes, everything to gain and nothing much to lose in the three-game city championship series with the Lang Chevrolet, starting Monday night at 6:15 o'clock.

Everybody expects Langs to win the series in two straight games but there is just an outside chance the shoe factory boys may play over their heads and make things more interesting for the National League champs than most people believe.

It was unfortunate that a bad break from the weather man prevented the Graham Paints and Carroll-Binder from meeting in the final game of the National League schedule Friday night, because the two teams were tied in the standing. This game would have decided undisputed possession of fourth place. Both teams won four games and lost eight. The Criterion also won four games but finished last because the Clothiers played and lost two more games than either Grams or Carroll-Binder.

The Clinton Supply Co. neared the city softball title at Wilmington last week by winning a two-game, play-off series with the Gallops. Three teams were contenders all season for the title there. The Clinton Supplies could beat the Gallops easily but seldom defeated the Auger Bits. The Auger Bits, strangely enough, had difficulty with the Gallops, so it was a topsy-turvy race all around.

The seventeen players selected as members of the all-star team which will participate in the benefit five-game post-season series, starting Friday this week, are urged to report at Washington Park instead of Cox Field for practice Wednesday night at 6 o'clock. The players will elect a captain and practice with the inside seam ball which will be used in the series. If the members of the team wear their own team uniforms during the series, as they probably will, a riot of color will be on display when the boys take the field.

The practice sessions are to be held at Washington Park because the Kiwanis-Rotary and Caddy softball teams of the American League received permission to use the Cox Field diamond Wednesday night, providing no city series game is played that evening, to play a practice game using the inside seam ball.

As there is every possibility the inside seam instead of the outside seam sphere will be in vogue in local softball circles next year, the Ki-Ro and Caddy players desire to try out the livelier ball to see whether it will be desirable to them.

The softball commission purchased eleven inside seam balls, all that were available in Dayton, for use in the coming post-season series. One inside seam ball, the kind used in night softball games, was also brought back to Xenia to be exhibited among the players and fans. This white ball, heavily lacquered, proved almost as hard as a regular baseball due to the many coats of paint and in the opinion of many fans would be impractical for nocturnal games unless the players wore gloves.

Women and children will be admitted free of charge to the post-season series at the athletic field, and although an admission of ten cents will be charged to men, the softball commission points out that fans may give more than this amount if they desire. If the games are well patronized, the Xenia Playground Association should be able to pay off all existing debts and still have a nice little nest egg to start off on next season.

PERMITS WHITE SOX BUT THREE HITS IN SUNDAY GAME HERE

Merchants Hit Hard But Old Master Scatters Them

Jasper Ankeney, pride of Zimmerman, held the Dayton White Sox in check throughout Sunday afternoon's renewal of a scheduled three-game series with this colored nine, while his teammates were rather lucky to push across three counters, the Xenia Merchants winning 3 to 0, to make it two straight and a clean sweep of the abbreviated series.

Xenia's three runs, one of which was unearned, came in the second, fifth and seventh innings. The first was scored without the aid of a hit. Cyphers reached first on an error, took second as Weller grounded out, advancing both runners and when Ruse grounded to the shortstop, the Dayton first baseman dropped Warner's throw letting in Weller with a run.

In the fifth Durnbaugh led off with a triple over Mitchell's head in deep right. Moore walked and stole second and when Mendenhall beat out a hit toward second, Durnbaugh crossed the rubber. Merchants tabbed their final run in the seventh on successive singles by Durnbaugh, Mendenhall and Cyphers.

Ankeney, Merchants hurler, curbed the visitors into a state of helplessness and allowed five hits besides fanning four batters and exhibiting perfect control. Only one White Sox player saw third base and this was in the ninth with two down. Pate tripped to center. Durnbaugh got his gloved hand on the ball but could not hold it. Pate never saw home plate, however, as Edwards bounced to third and was tossed out, preserving Ankeney's shutout game.

Ankeney was opposed on the mound by that aged southpaw, Perkins, who was hit safely in every inning but the second, but was supreme in the pinches. Off his delivery the Merchants gathered twelve hits and they had just that many runners left on the paths. Perkins was pretty wild. Being a left-hander he walked three batters and hit another.

Durnbaugh's hitting and fielding were the high spots of the contest. The slugging center-fielder struck out his first time at bat, then hit a triple and two singles on his other three trips to the platter. In the sixth he robbed Fox of an extra base hit with a brilliant catch and easily doubled a runner off second. The White Sox also made one double-killing in the eighth when Fields made a difficult catch of Johnson's fly in short right and nipped Ankeney, who had singled before he could return to first base.

Mike Weller laced out two hits and walked once and Allan Mendenhall, playing third base, beat out two infield hits. Pate led the Dayton hitting with a triple and single.

Ankeney had the boys hitting little rollers or pop-fies all afternoon. The Merchant outfielders had only two putouts, whereas Ankeney himself had seven assists and one put-out. He fielded his position wonderfully well.

Next Sunday the Merchants will resume another pending series with the Lincoln Cubs, another Dayton colored nine, and are counting on making it two straight over the Cubs.

IDLE HOUR CLUB BEATS DAYTON TEAM 12 TO 7 IN SUNDAY CONTEST

Although hits were equally divided, the Idle Hour Club softballers put their fourteen bingles to more intelligent use and contrived to spank the Dayton Yeoman's nine, 12 to 7 in a free-hitting game Sunday afternoon on the Mullberry St. diamond here.

Hargrave pitched the first three innings for the winners Bradshaw hurled the last six, being the victim of a five-run Dayton rally in the first half of the ninth round. By that time, however, the Xenia boys had the contest safely tucked away. The Idle Hour nine smacked out

Industrial track and field meet at Deer Creek Common, Cincinnati, Saturday.

The Pennsylvania won the meet with 75 points, the nearest competitor being the track team of the Union Central Life Insurance Co. which trailed in second place with 44 points. The four-man 440-yard relay team won the event with a mark of 0:49.35 considered good time for that type of meet.

Fuller was also entered in the 50-yard dash but was set back a yard for trying to beat the gun, and did not finish in the money. DeHart Hubbard, famous Negro track star whose brother was in the meet, was starter.

The Pennsylvania division team will take part in the regional track and field meet of the railroad at Indianapolis September 6 and the winning team there will go to Altoona, Pa., later to compete with athletes from the entire system.

Fuller is also training a number of junior athletes for the events at Indianapolis, sons and daughters of employees being eligible for events scheduled for youngsters. He is also a member of the division baseball team.

UNIQUE MINIATURE LINKS TO BE INFORMALLY OPENED HERE

"The Garden Links," an attractive nine-hole miniature golf course constructed by Lawrence E. John in the rear of his residence on N. Galloway St., will be opened informally Tuesday afternoon and evening, the owner announces.

The new course is essentially a private one but Mr. John is having a number of privilege cards printed to distribute among his friends, the midget links being too small to accommodate a large number of people at one time.

Mr. John was the pioneer in the miniature golf movement in Xenia and his course is entirely different from the ordinary variety of miniature courses in that the greens are shaped like the regulation greens of regular golf courses and they are no tricky, artificial hazards.

Natural hazards, are present, however, and a few of the owner's friends who have practiced over it were enthusiastic about its prospects. Bar for the nine holes has been tentatively fixed at twenty-one strokes and the holes range from eighteen to thirty yards apart.

Mr. John has only a small supply of golf clubs on hand at present, including niblicks, mashie-niblicks, putters and a new club he obtained known as a clipper, which will come in handy for short, pitch shots, particularly on the hole with the outdoor swimming pool as the principal hazard.

The course will be well lighted and attractively decorated and although not open entirely to the public, will not be exactly exclusive as the privilege cards will enable many of the owner's friends to enjoy the sport.

Miss Josephine John, daughter of Mr. John, who will act as hostess in charge of the links, plans to entertain a few of her girl friends with a bridge-golf party at her residence Monday night.

The greens and the fairways are sodded and the new course is perhaps unique in the country.

REFUELING TOO?

In the wake of endurance contests of every description, sweeping the country, comes the miniature golf endurance contest.

Such a contest was scheduled to begin at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon over the Old Mill Camp midget golf links located at Cedarville with the contestants hoping to exceed the world's record of 124 hours of continuous play, recently established.

CITY TITLE SERIES WILL START MONDAY

The Lang Chevrolet, champions of the National League, and the Krippendorff-Dittman Co., winners in the American League, will mingle Monday night at Cox Athletic Field in the opener of scheduled three-game series with the 1930 city softball championship at stake.

Announcement is made the inaugural game and also succeeding series tilts will start at 6:15 o'clock, fifteen minutes earlier than usual, in the hope that complete nine-inning games may be played.

Either John Gibney or Harry Williams will be assigned to pitch the series opener for Langs with "Pino" Perrine on the firing line for the American League champs. No admission will be charged for this series.

PLAN FOR PICNIC

Members of Xenia Lodge, No. 49, F. and A. M., and their families are urged to bring well-filled baskets to the old-fashioned picnic and outing to be sponsored by the lodge at the Masonic Temple and in Shawnee Park Wednesday afternoon and evening. The entertainment will start at 3 o'clock and will be featured by various contests with prizes awarded the winners.

SPLASH

She Swims to Conquer

By Eleanore Burnett

READ THIS FIRST:

Kitty Wilmet, secretary to Elly Goss, assists Gordon Platt, Goss' confidential man, with whom she is daily falling in love, in running down a "leak" in the office; Atlee Goss' chief clerk, asks her to marry him. She does not accept. After meeting Boss Kelliher at a party given by Hilda, "phone operator," she is later accosted by him, and he asks her to work for him, at a thousand dollars a month.

Next day, in the East Side Natatorium, she defeats a professional swimmer in an impromptu race. She is shocked when Platt tells her a gambler, Tom Gayle, won a five thousand dollar bet on her, and indignantly rejects the money. Gayle tried to pay as her share. She tells Platt about Kelliher's offer; Platt thinks it indicates Kelliher's connection with the leak.

Determined to be more active in helping Gordon, although not yet ready to confess Atlee's actions or knowledge of Kelliher, Kitty asks help of Hilda's Spike Harden, through whom she gets the idea of employing a private detective agency. She finds "Henderson" in the "phone book, but on being shown into a private office as "Miss Smith" is shocked to be greeted by Tom Gayle, the gambler. Gordon said had bet on her.

Next day in East Side Natatorium she defeats a professional swimmer in an impromptu race, but is shocked when Platt tells her a gambler, Tom Gayle, won a five thousand dollar bet on her and indignantly rejects money Gayle offers her through Platt.

Wanting to help Platt, but not ready to tell all she knows of Atlee, Kitty asks help of Spike Harden, who suggests a private detective agency, where she is shocked to find Gayle, the gambler who bet on her, in charge. But she is happy to learn that Platt returned his money; and falls asleep that night dreaming of the kiss Platt never tried to give her.

Her home-town lover, John Spurgeon, arrives unexpectedly in New York. Kitty stages a party for him with friends; she sees Platt, who cuts her dead.

Tormented by jealousy she speaks to Platt as she dances by him; he denies his own name. She refuses a proposal from John. Next day Platt tells her he was doing secret work and did not want the suspicion to know his name; Kitty hears for the first time of Gila Mine stock.

Taking impromptu dictation from Goss, she lays a plan to foil the information thief. She learns John Spurgeon is investing in Gila Mine stock, which she knows is to drop. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 27

Kitty walked her bedroom floor in an agony of indecision. She couldn't let John continue in the ownership of stock she knew would drop with a dull sickening thud, and thus lose all he had. She couldn't tell him to sell it before it fell without telling him how she knew; and M. Goss had told her she must tell no one, and had added that Gordon Platt said she was to be trusted. And if her false notes were responsible she still more couldn't tell John! Her first impulse was to lay her difficulties before Gordon. Some obscure feeling of modesty and fear of rousing more jealousy of John's aimed her. She wanted Gordon to be a little palous—what girl does not? But Kitty was essentially honest and frank. She knew, now, that Gordon had only to ask her and she would say "yes!" If she went to him with John's troubles, might he not think she was unduly interested in John?

Her thoughts turned to Sally; big, beautiful Sally, who never had any trouble, who looked at the world with calm, unfrightened eyes. Impulsively she called a taxi and flew to the big girl she loved and trusted.

"So glad to see you!" cried Sally. "It's been a long time."

"Why, you see me every day!" protested Kitty.

"Oh, in the office we are all just cogs in the machine! I mean, long since I had seen you here—" Sally sighed.

"Where's Baby?" asked Kitty. To her amazement Sally turned a worried face to her, the tears standing in her eyes. "I don't know!" she whispered. "I—don't know!"

"You don't know! Is she lost or anything?"

Sally nodded, miserably. "I hate to say so, but I'm afraid she's in trouble. She won't tell me where she goes or whom she goes with. She stays out to outrageous hours. She has mysterious telephone calls. And—"

"Yes?" encouraged Kitty.

"Oh, it was despicable, but I asked Bert and Joe and they followed her one night, and she met some one we don't know, and that night she didn't get home until five in the morning!" cried Sally.

Kitty comforted her as well as she could, making a mental resolve to have a heart to heart talk with Baby. But in the face of Sally's anxiety she couldn't tell her of her own perturbation. Even if Sally had not had trouble of her own, Kitty asked herself how she could have told without breaking Mr. Goss' confidence?

Then whom could she tell? To let John Spurgeon lose—impossible. To break faith with Mr. Goss and her lover—even more impossible. To—

The door bell rang. Kitty answered it for Sally, and held out a friendly hand to welcome Fatty Hemming. Suddenly she saw light; perhaps she could steer Fatty right without telling him anything. Perhaps—

"I like your friend Spurgeon!" cried Fatty as he came in. "Going to make a little money for him?"

"How?" asked Kitty. "Good of you, if you can!"

"Bought a hundred Gila Mine for him on a twenty point margin!" answered Fatty. "Sure to go up fifteen or twenty points!"

"How can you be sure?" asked Kitty, knowing he was mistaken. "That's my business—being sure!" laughed Fatty.

"But suppose, suppose you are mistaken?" breathed Kitty. He must have seen her false notes! Who could have read them?

"But I'm not! Why your own boss is behind it! Every one in the street knows he's all set to make a killing in that stock. It's been bought right and left. It's up half a point tonight!"

Kitty did not dare answer. Fatty Hemming was clever but he had been taken in—and by her false notes. He would guess she knew something, if she said much about it. There was no help here—"Oh, what shall I do? I can't be the cause of his loss! It's not fair! It's not right! His mother's eyes—our long friendship—if I only had some money! If I only—"

"Fatty!" she cried. "Could you buy or sell stock for me?"

"If you've got cash for margin, yes, otherwise, no!" answered Fatty. "Why?"

"A—A fortune teller gave me a tip," she answered in a flat voice. That was no good, then. She had to have money, to keep John from losing money. How get it? Kelliher? Out of the question. Borrow? From whom? Gordon was the only one she knew who might have a few thousands idle. She could not borrow from her lover—even a lover who had not spoken—to save a lover who had! Every instinct in her was against it.

How, how, how make money? Baby drifted slowly in and Kitty had to give over her speculations. Baby looked ill and worn. Something was evidently radically wrong. Her eyes lacked lustre, her face was pale and her hands trembled.

"Kit, you are a sight for sore eyes. I like your country town man friend. But he's a lamb among wolves!" remarked Baby.

Kitty shrank; it was truer than Baby knew.

Unexpectedly, Baby pulled her to the very front room. "Want a word with you?" she said. "When they were alone she asked eagerly. 'Have you seen Atlee lately?'"

"Every day, at the office," answered Kitty.

"No, no! I don't mean that! I mean—out anywhere."

"No," answered Kitty. Baby's face fell. She turned away.

"Baby, what's the trouble?" demanded Kitty. "You are worrying Sally. You look ill. Are you—are you?"

Baby's eyes flashed. She drew herself up, proudly.

"I am not accountable for my actions to any one!" she declared. "Are you sure you haven't seen Atlee?"

Kitty had an inspiration.

"No, but I'm going to!" she cried. "I'm going to tell him that you are in trouble. I'm going to tell him where you go, whom you meet, that you don't get home until morning, that Sally is sick because her small sister is making a fool of herself. Maybe Atlee can stop it!"

Baby threw herself on Kitty, holding tight. "No, no!" she cried. "You mustn't! Oh, Kitty, you mustn't! You mustn't spill the beans, that way—promise me, promise me!"

Kitty stroked her hands, trying to quiet her. "If I don't, will you behave? Will you stop worrying me?"

Sally? Will you snap out of this dissipation?"

"It isn't what you think!" moaned Baby. "But—yes, I'll be good. Only promise me you won't tell Atlee!"

Kitty wondered. "But you and Atlee both said you were nothing to each other!" she protested. "Why do you care so much?"

But Baby did not answer. And Kitty had another anxiety to add to those which already possessed her.

In the cab going home that night she said:—"Fatty, how long will it be before John's stock goes up and makes him some money?"

"Ought to be tomorrow—maybe the next day or the day after. We look for it to be all over by the 17th or 18th. It's scheduled, in private circles, to begin to sky rocket on the 15th."

Kitty said no more. Something in the sentence struck a familiar chord in her mind; something sounded as if she ought to know, to understand that which was not plain.

She said good night to Fatty absently and made ready for bed in a haze of deep thought. Whatever his words had touched in her memory was elusive. She went over his answer word by word. "Seventeenth—eighteenth—sky rocket on the fifteenth—fifteenth—"

Suddenly she gasped.

"The interstate annual swim Columbia Natatorium—the fifteenth!" Mr. Gayle said a pot of money was to be made by a dark horse! That's the way to help John!"

Distaste for professional swimming for herself, disapproval of betting on races, fear of Gordon's frown—she weighed them all. Yet John, about to be ruined, must be saved. Far better swim as a professional and make enough money to sell the same amount of stock John had bought, and thus save him, than to keep her ideals of swimming and amateurism.

"I'll go to Mr. Gayle tomorrow!" she resolved. "He'll know how to help me!"

Then she cried herself to sleep. In helpless fear lest Gordon attend the interstate annual and see her as a professional swimmer.

WILL HOLD PAGEANT FOR DEDICATION OF MEMORIAL TRAIL

O. K. Reams of Zanesfield, a member of the Ohio Revolutionary Memorial Committee, was selected Friday to direct the pageant which will be a part of the dedicatory exercises to be held October 9 and 10 in Springfield.

At this time the old trails system over Western Ohio will be formally dedicated by Governor Myers, Cooper of Ohio, starting at Cincinnati, and culminating October 9 and 10 in a two day celebration at Springfield, Ohio, where the battle of Piqua will be commemorated in a pageant with a review of state troops by the governor, sham battle and a number of other events of equal interest, plans for which have not been definitely worked out.

Mr. Reams for many years has directed the Zanesfield pageant which has proved to be a great success, both from an historical and scenic nature.

The Sesqui-Centennial Committee of Springfield is working in cooperation with the Ohio Revolutionary Memorial Commission, and the tentative program worked out Friday is subject to the approval of the body. Mr. Reams is, however, a member of the commission together with A. D. Hosterman and Senator Kuhns from Dayton.

LIVESTOCK TRUCKING ON THE INCREASE

At two terminal markets, Indianapolis and Sioux City, the receipts of hogs by truck for the year 1929 totaled 63 and 64 per cent, respectively. These two markets have grown by leaps and bounds as far as hog receipts are concerned. Ten years ago Indianapolis received 27 per cent of the total hog receipts by truck or wagon while Sioux City received only 6 per cent.

The percentage of total truck receipts at all of the important Ohio markets continues to grow. Thirty-two per cent of the hog receipts at Cincinnati and eighteen per cent at Cleveland were received by truck during 1929, according to G. F. Henning of the Ohio Experiment Station. The first six months of 1930 indicate that the truck receipts will again show an increase over 1929. Most of the hogs (around 85 per cent) came to Cleveland from within a radius of seventy miles or less, and 92 per cent at Cincinnati came from within a radius of sixty miles or less. Most statements of distances trucked give the exceptional cases where long distances have been traveled, but it is seen from the above figures that the bulk of the livestock is coming from nearby farms and only a relatively small percentage is trucked 100 miles or more. Even at some of our western markets, particularly Chicago, East St. Louis, and Peoria, investigation has shown that very few animals are trucked over 100 miles. It may be possible within the next few years for more and more of the livestock to be trucked from seventy-five to one hundred miles, which will still further increase the total truck receipts.

One of the important factors which has permitted trucking to increase rapidly has been the development of good roads. Another factor influencing the use of the truck has been that of convenience. The truck also gives the livestock producer more flexibility, for he can market his livestock any day he chooses.

Many farmers believe that animals shrink less when trucked. This is a debatable point and, to date, not enough information is available would seem to indicate that there is very little difference. Livestock trucking is changing in some areas and modifying the systems in others. With the continued development of good roads, and more farmer-owned trucks, all indications point toward still further increased receipts by the traveled, but it is seen from the Beautiful girls can't act. Perfect beauty is a handicap. The emotional woman with striking features is many times the better actress on the screen!

So says Cecil B. DeMille, veteran director, in the current Photoplay. "I have never selected beautiful women for the leading roles in any of my pictures," he says.

And if that means that such fascinating figures as Gloria Swanson, Bebe Daniels, Leatrice Joy, Jetta

CECIL B. DeMILLE

Goudal, Nita Naldi and Julia Fay are not beautiful, well, that's what DeMille intends it to mean.

Swanson's little turned-up nose puts her completely out of the class of real beauties—but it adds to her effectiveness, he says. The same is true of Daniels and the rest. He scoffs at the axiom that beauty is only skin deep.

Beauties as leading women are too posy, too stilted, too unwilling to reflect emotions and thus rattle the beautiful calm of their classic features, he says. Katherine MacDonald, he says, was the only real beauty he ever cast and her tenure was brief and she is now in obscurity. Florence Vidor comes near being beautiful, but for the rest DeMille relies on isolated striking features such as striking eyes, flashing mannerisms and fascinating ankles.

Blood, as they say, will tell, and for that reason you may train the son of a movie actor for the law, medicine, or bridge-building but, in the long run, he will turn out to be a movie actor.

Douglas Fairbanks wanted his boy to be a painter, but he already has half a dozen successful movie roles behind him. Taylor Holmes sent his son Philip to Princeton to carve out some career in a field calling for formal education.

James Gleason and his six-foot son, Russell, are now working together in a picture. J. C. and Elliott Nugent not only act together, but collaborate on stories. John Beery Jr., at 17, has made his debut in pictures. William Collier Sr. and Jr. are well-known players. The younger Francis X.

Bushman is rising rapidly. And the name of Harold Lockwood, the star who died so tragically during the flu epidemic in 1918, has been brought back to the screen by his son of the same name. Joseph Schildkraut, son of the late famous Rudolph, turned out to be a better-than-average violinist, but the call of his father's calling was too much for him.

Josephine Velez, sister of Lupe, makes her movie debut as a cafe cigarette girl in "Her Man," a Pathe film. She is a year older than Lupe and looks enough like her famous sister to be her twin.

DEPENDABLE MERCHANDISE

And What It Means

IF YOU WERE CRITICALLY ILL and needed the attention of a specialist how would you go about your selection of the man to minister to your needs? Would you look over the list of available specialists, considering those known to be the most reliable in their particular line, and then select some unknown because you were told that he might be "just as good" as the dependable physician?

OR WOULD YOU GO DIRECT to the man who had proven himself in previous cases to be the most expert in his line? Most assuredly you would follow the latter method.

BUYING MERCHANDISE over the counter is no different than buying the services of an expert physician. When a person lays down cold cash for a piece of merchandise, whether it be a pound of coffee or a fur coat, he has the right to demand that he get full value for his money. He should insist that the merchandise be the best that is available at that particular price. When some one tells you that a product is "just as good" as a piece of dependable merchandise even though it sells at a lower price, you can reliably make up your mind that there is some particular reason why this particular product is being sold so cheaply.

NATIONALLY ADVERTISED MERCHANDISE which has proved its dependability over a period of years can be purchased across the counters of your Independent Merchants. It is to the merchant's advantage to offer these products for sale, for their very dependability insures satisfaction, and satisfaction creates good will and makes for better trade and increased business. Your Independent Merchant who carries these nationally advertised brands will not try to foist something that is "just as good" off on you in lieu of a standard product.

WHENEVER YOU SEE A PRIVATE BRAND made for certain merchandising institutions and offered at a lower price than a standard brand, ask yourself the all important question, "Shall I buy something that I know is dependable, or shall I take a chance?" You have a right to insist upon the best.

THIS IS NUMBER TWENTY OF A SERIES OF ADVERTISEMENTS DEALING WITH LOCAL MERCHANDISING CONDITIONS, SPONSORED BY THE INDEPENDENT MERCHANTS OF XENIA AND THEIR FRIENDS.

WORLD SPECULATES UPON CONTENTS OF EXPLORERS' DIARY

Learn Balloonists Had Travelled 117 Miles On Foot

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 25.—The interest and curiosity of a thrilled world was focused today on a few brittle sheets of paper that formed the diary of ill-starred Salomon Auguste Andree and his two companions, courageous martyrs of exploration who perished in 1897 after making a gallant attempt to cross the top of the world in a balloon.

As the sailing vessel Brattvaag, carrying the bodies of the polar trio as well as Dr. Gunnar Horn and his party of explorers who made the discovery, fought its way

BOWERSVILLE MAN ESCAPES WITH CUTS AS TRAIN HITS AUTO

Charles Cline, 47, Bowersville, considered himself lucky Monday morning.

His automobile was struck by a fast west-bound Pennsylvania passenger train at the dangerous Jamestown Pike crossing one mile east of Xenia, but he lived to tell the story.

Cline escaped with minor cuts, two on the head, one on the arm and one on the side, which were dressed at the office of Dr. W. A. Galloway, Pennsylvania Railway surgeon. His automobile was demolished.

"I was driving east going home from Xenia and when I saw the train I put on the brakes, but my car skidded onto the tracks and whirled, facing the train," said Cline after his injuries were dressed.

"I straightened out the car but by that time I had skidded off the crossing and the left front wheel skidded on a rail of the east tracks turning my machine facing the train. It was nearly out of the path of the train, though, but the engine hit my car on the left side."

The locomotive wedged the sedan between the east tracks. It did not upset and the occupant was not thrown out. "I wasn't scared—didn't have time to be," said Cline.

He had gotten out of his wrecked car by the time trainmen stopped the train and returned to the scene. The train was extra-fare passenger No. 41 from New York and was in charge of A. J. Harcourt, Columbus, conductor, who is a former Xenian.

Construction of automatic flash signals at the Jamestown Pike crossing has just been started by the railroad.

FORMAL RITES MARK PROGRAM AT TRADES BUILDING MONDAY

Architect Speaks At Exercises; To Cost $80,000

"As a building is bound together by its cornerstones so the lives of people are bound together by service," stated Col. Robert S. Harsha, Columbus, at the laying of the cornerstone of the new trades building at the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home Monday morning at 10 o'clock. Col. Harsha is a member of Harsha and Associates, the architectural firm which planned the new building at the institution.

"Children of the institution will receive training in this new building that will enable them to meet outside competition when they go out into the world in later years," Col. Harsha said. "People who are outstanding successes today have trained hands as well as trained minds. In this new building it is hoped that the pupils will find things that they like to do because then they can do it well and will make a success when they leave this institution," Col. Harsha explained.

The simple impressive ceremony of the laying of the cornerstone was in charge of Capt. Harold L. Hays, superintendent of the Home. Music by the Cadet Band and singing by the children of the institution opened the ceremony which was witnessed by Home pupils, members of the staff and Home employees.

Miss E. Jane Bailey, Wapakoneta, secretary of the board of trustees, and only member of the board present Monday morning, placed the new cornerstone in position and made a few short remarks. A copper box was placed inside the large cornerstone and inside the box the following articles were placed: a list of the names of the board of trustees and superintendent, a copy of the Columbus Dispatch, dated Saturday, August 23; a copy of the Cincinnati Times-Star and the Dayton Journal, same date; a Xenia Gazette, the 1930 reunion edition of the Home Weekly; a copy of the Home Weekly containing a picture of the new trades building; samples of work done by boys in the printing department of the Home; a copy of the Xenia Gazette, dated September 23, 1923, which contained an article on the dedication of the new Home hospital; a picture of the hospital; a roster of children in the Home; list of the Home employees; list of staff members; list of officers of the 1930 Ex-pupils Association and a display of work from the machine shop.

Following the laying of the cornerstone by Miss Bailey, prayer was offered by the Rev. W. H. Tilford, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church. Group singing and music by the band closed the exercises.

The new trades building will be ready for occupancy by the first of next year it is hoped by Home officials. It is to be a two-story brick structure, 120 by 150 feet and costing approximately $80,000. It will replace the old trades building which was erected in 1870. An additional $20,000 will be spent to equip the new building which will add an attractive appearance to the grounds of the institution.

FIND BODIES OF BALLOONISTS WHO SOUGHT POLE

Finding the frozen body of Solomon August Andree, inset, with that of an unidentified comrade, at a camp at Victoria Island, Franz Josef Land by a Norwegian fishing vessel, recalls the first attempted aerial expedition to the north pole, thirty-three years ago. Andree set out in the above balloon from Spitzbergen for Alaska via the north pole. With the bodies, which were in a good state of preservation, was found Andree's diary, which is expected to reveal the adventures and privations of the pioneer balloonists. Photo shows balloon being repaired at Spitzbergen prior to start.

SCHNEIDER SETS NEW RECORD FOR FLIGHT

NURSE IS HEROINE

CLEVELAND, Aug. 25.—Mrs. Edith Campbell, nurse at Lakeside Hospital, was hailed a heroine today, following her daring rescue of a crippled child from probable death at the hospital yesterday when a heavy concrete ceiling cracked and fell.

Seeing the ceiling cracking, Mrs. Campbell rushed to the cot where the child lay and carried him away just as the bed was showered with plaster and pieces of concrete. She also aided three other children on wheelchairs to escape as large pieces of the ceiling fell to the floor.

Youth Returns East To Break Round-Trip Mark

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Aug. 25.—"Hello, pop, I made it."

That was the greeting to his father by happy Eddie Schneider, who today holds the coast-to-coast round trip junior flight record, as he ended the final leg of his trip.

The 18-year-old pilot landed here Sunday after 4 p. m., as a crowd of 2,000 cheered. He completed the flight from Los Angeles in twenty-seven hours, nineteen minutes and made a roundtrip record of fifty-seven hours, having flown from east to west in twenty-nine hours and forty-one minutes.

His record broke by one hour and thirty-six minutes the round-trip time of Frank Goldsborough, the boy flier who was killed when his plane crashed in Vermont.

Bucking strong winds, Schneider flew from Columbus to New York in a single day. He was not tired, he said, but hungry, having gone without food on the entire last leg of his trip.

He plans to fly to Chicago, where he will compete in the national air races.

Young Schneider said he was impressed with the vast wastes in the west where he flew for more than 100 miles without sighting signs of habitation. He also was surprised, he said, at the large number of air hitch-hikers. He refused rides to scores.

The young pilot brought with him a letter from the mayor of Los Angeles to Mayor Walker of New York and one to Mayor Hague of Jersey City, Schneider's home town.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH VERDICT RETURNED IN COLLISION CASE

Coroner Discovers Cause; Voller Will Recover

Accidental death was the verdict returned by Coroner R. L. Haines, Jamestown, following his investigation into the tragic auto accident early Saturday afternoon on the Jamestown Pike which claimed the lives of Mrs. Mary Louise Voller, of Chillicothe, and her 3-year-old son, John William.

J. W. Voller, husband of Mrs. Voller, remains in a serious condition at McClellan Hospital but is expected to recover. He sustained a broken left shoulder, broken pelvis, fractured right ribs and abdominal injuries.

The accident occurred when the Voller machine collided head-on with an auto operated by James Stroud, 35, of 440 N. Detroit St., Xenia, who received minor chest injuries.

Mrs. Voller and her youngest son, their necks broken, were dead when they were taken from the wrecked car. Another son, Harold, 6, escaped with minor cuts and bruises, and a colored maid, Marie Pettiford, was injured only slightly. The maid was able to return to her home in Chillicothe Saturday night.

The bodies of Mrs. Voller and her son were taken to the Brough undertaking parlors in Birmingham, where funeral services will be held at the home of her mother, Mrs. Matilda Hamilton, proprietress of the Hamilton Inn in that city, at 2 p. m. Tuesday. The Rev. Earl McKinney, Springfield, former pastor

G. A. R. GATHERS FOR MEETING

CINCINNATI, O., Aug. 25.—Aging members of the Grand Army of the Republic were gathered here today to participate in their sixty-fourth annual encampment.

At the opening of the encampment yesterday, thousands of Cincinnatians witnessed the flag-raising ceremony and the booming of a 21-gun salute to the memory of the "boys" who lost their lives in the Civil War and those who have died since.

Trees were dedicated, flags were presented, medals were bestowed, and many speeches eulogized the "boys," now old and feeble, who gallantly tramped off to war in '61.

Many Negroes dotted the huge crowd which had gathered to pay homage to the men who helped to emancipate them.

The five-day encampment will culminate next Friday with a steamer pilgrimage to the birthplace of General U. S. Grant, at Point Pleasant, Ohio.

CHARLES FRALEY IS SOUGHT; VICTIM IS SEVERELY WOUNDED

John Corrigan Made Target Of Enraged Veteran Sunday

Charles Fraley, 45, of Grape Grove, five miles east of Jamestown, wanted in connection with the shooting at 5 p. m. Sunday of John Corrigan, 46, farm laborer, who is reported in a serious condition at St. Elizabeth Hospital, Dayton, with 300 bird shot imbedded in his body, was the object of an intensive man-hunt conducted by county authorities Sunday night and early Monday.

Corrigan, who resides with his three children, on the farm of William Taylor on the Paulin Road, four and a half miles northeast of Jamestown, was shot twice with a shotgun while standing in his front yard.

Sheriff Ohmer Tate was advised that Fraley drove up in front of Corrigan's home and without alighting from the machine, called the latter out in the yard. Corrigan went to the front gate, about twenty-five feet from the car. Fraley is said to have asked Corrigan for a drink and when the latter replied, "I ain't got any," Fraley is alleged to have declared, "I'll just shoot you then." Whereupon it is claimed he fired twice with the shotgun, the first charge striking Corrigan in the legs and the second in the back as he turned to escape.

Fraley then drove away, the sheriff was told. Corrigan's son notified William Taylor who summoned Dr. R. L. Haines, Jamestown. Dr. Haines ordered Corrigan removed to the Dayton hospital in an ambulance of F. E. Burr, Jamestown funeral director. Dr. Haines announced that about 300 shot

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 25.—In one of the most daring daylight hold-ups on record here, three armed bandits today entered the Gude jewelry store shortly after the doors were opened, cowed the proprietor and his assistant with drawn guns and made their escape with jewelry worth $2,000 and $300 in cash.

H. W. Montgomery, manager, was removing two trays of rings and cash from the office safe when the trio entered. Montgomery and A. Mallen, the assistant, were held at bay while the bandits looted the safe and tray.

Their getaway was made in an automobile which had been parked nearby.

GRAF ZEPPELIN IS DAMAGED IN START

BERLIN, Aug. 25.—The German air liner Graf Zeppelin suffered slight damage to her horizontal rudder today in soaring off from Staaken airfield near here, but continued to Friedrichshafen without interruption.

WOULD USE PLANE

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 25.—Seeking to locate exactly four ships in Lake Erie, all said to be ships with rum, Commander Marlin W. Rasmussen of the coast guard today was to ask Washington officials to lend him an airplane to aid in the search. Rasmussen said seventy-five coast guard craft were watching to prevent the ships from unloading their cargoes.

PLAN RECEPTION

TROMSOE, Norway, Aug. 25.—The sealing boat Brattvaag, bearing the bodies of the three polar explorers, who in 1897 lost their lives in an attempt to reach the north pole in a balloon, will arrive here next Monday or Tuesday if good weather continues, it was estimated today.

Elaborate ceremonies are being planned for the boat's reception, aboard which also is Dr. Gunnar Horn and the other men who discovered the ill-fated polar pioneers.

through fast freezing seas in the hope of reaching Norway before the end of the month, a waiting world speculated on the future ownership of the all-important diary.

Dr. Horn, it was believed in some circles, has contemplated delivering to the Swedish government the little record of momentous events and adventure in the far north as painfully inscribed by Andree before death ended his suffering. In that event, there is the dismal probability that the fascinating account may be locked away in the mysterious and secret files alongside other government documents, depriving an avidly interested generation of perhaps the richest story of adventurous life and death in the grim icefields.

An inkling of the luscious store of what the little diary has to offer already has been gleaned from a single sentence deciphered from one of the pages:

15th July, 1897, 83 degrees north 32 degrees east."

That bare entry unfolded to its discoverers, a story in itself—a long

PILSUDSKI WILL BE POLISH DICTATOR

WARSAW, Poland, Aug. 25.—The fast growing lineup of European dictators was ready to augment its ranks today with the impressive figure of Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, hitherto Poland's covered mainspring of power, who announced he was ready to cope with all governmental problems following resignation Saturday of Premier Walery Salawek and his cabinet.

Bitter political wrangles are expected when Pilsudski officially announces his leadership. He already has wide opposition since the frank declaration that he reserved for himself decisions in the most important government matters, obviously leaving to the cabinet merely the routine ministerial duties.

NINE BRITISH SOLDIERS SLAIN IN CLASH WITH WAZIR TRIBES

LONDON, Aug. 25.—Nine British soldiers, including one officer, were killed and ten were injured in a clash between Wazir tribesmen and British defense forces on the northwestern Indian frontier today, according to London evening newspapers.

Twenty-six tribesmen were slain, five were wounded and seventy were taken prisoners during the fierce hand-to-hand battle which occurred in the Bannu section, south of Khyber Pass, reports stated.

The tribesmen carried out their attack after authorities had disarmed natives in surrounding villages following recent attacks on Peshawar by Afridi tribesmen.

The sudden assault by the tribesmen was attributed to malice against the British caused by the disarmament of Wazir villages by the British, the village inhabitants had been aiding Afridi bands during their recent campaign against foreigners in the Peshawar district, according to reports.

YOUTH KILLED AFTER MURDER OF OFFICERS

Enters Crime Career When Jilted By His Sweetheart

EMO, Ont., Aug. 25.—Jilted by his sweetheart, Emmerick Fernetto, 20, of Port Francis, Ont., embarked on a short-lived but sensational career of crime, during which he held up a crack passenger train, murdered two United States immigration inspectors and then lost his own life early today as the result of a wound suffered in a gun battle with officers.

In a death-bed confession, Fernetto, who hitherto had been known as a model youth, said his brief, but bloody fling at crime followed a misunderstanding with his sweetheart, whom he did not name. Police are searching for the girl for questioning.

"After that nothing mattered," Fernetto, his body wracked with the pain of his wound, said. "I wanted to get away from her, from Port Francis—from everything!"

Young Fernetto was fatally wounded by provincial police after he had sought refuge in a farm house and withstood an hour's siege.

The youth struck his first blow at society late Saturday night when he stole an automobile in Port Francis with the intention of leaving town. Captured by Constable Sidney Wall, he escaped with a handcuff dangling from his wrist and boarded a west bound Canadian National passenger train which was just leaving Port Francis.

Near Emo, he held up the train crew and locked them in a smoking compartment after relieving them of money and valuables. A shot which he fired through the compartment door, apparently with the intention of frightening his prisoners, awakened Lawrence E. Dalton, of Ranier, Minn., and Lawrence E. Jones of Warroad, Minn. Both United States immigration inspectors who were riding the train to prevent aliens from crossing the border.

The two American officers started toward the smoking compartment. Fernetto met them in the narrow aisle and in a brief gun-battle shot and killed both men. Leaping across the bodies of the officers, he ran to the head of the train and held up the engineer and fireman and forced them to apply the brakes.

The house was soon surrounded by police and in the ensuing gun-battle he was fatally wounded after smoke bombs forced him to leave his shelter.

TEMPLE OFFICIALS TARGET OF ASSAULT BY MOTHER KENNEDY

Challenges Board In Latest Statement; Aimee Silent

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 25.—Although still confined to her bed in a Brentwood sanitarium, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, mother of Aimee Simple McPherson, noted evangelist, was robust enough to hurl stinging phrases in the direction of Angelus Temple officers, who, she claims, are trying to discredit her daughter and gain control of the temple.

Meanwhile, her daughter is also confined to her bed at her Malibu Beach cottage, where she is reported recovering from a threatened nervous breakdown. She is closely guarded by officers of the temple and has issued no statements since admonishing her mother "to go and talk no more."

That Mrs. Kennedy was still greatly interested in her daughter and her affairs was evident when she stated that she "would honor the temple board to strict accountability if anything happens to my daughter, either physically, mentally or financially."

The battle between Mrs. Kennedy and her daughter, which was said to have revolved around certain of the evangelist's advisors, came to a head last week.

As the aftermath, Mrs. Kennedy charged that her nose was broken during a fist encounter with her daughter. The evangelist's adherents said Mrs. Kennedy was recovering from a face-lifting operation. This was likewise denied.

Mrs. Kennedy appeared to be irked more than a little by the reports issued concerning her daughter's condition. At various times she has been reported near death. These reports, and others which said the evangelist had sought to have an operation to remove excess fat from her legs, were all part of a plot to discredit Mrs. McPherson, according to her mother.

"For more than three years," said Mrs. Kennedy, "they have been plotting to get the temple away from Aimee. They forced me out, and now they are trying to force her out."

YOUTH RETURNS EAST TO BREAK ROUND-TRIP MARK

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Aug. 25.—"Hello, pop, I made it."

That was the greeting to his father by happy Eddie Schneider, who today holds the coast-to-coast round trip junior flight record, as he ended the final leg of his trip.

The 18-year-old pilot landed here Sunday after 4 p. m., as a crowd of 2,000 cheered. He completed the flight from Los Angeles in twenty-seven hours, nineteen minutes and made a roundtrip record of fifty-seven hours, having flown from east to west in twenty-nine hours and forty-one minutes.

His record broke by one hour and thirty-six minutes the round-trip time of Frank Goldsborough, the boy flier who was killed when his plane crashed in Vermont.

Bucking strong winds, Schneider flew from Columbus to New York in a single day. He was not tired, he said, but hungry, having gone without food on the entire last leg of his trip.

He plans to fly to Chicago, where he will compete in the national air races.

Young Schneider said he was impressed with the vast wastes in the west where he flew for more than 100 miles without sighting signs of habitation. He also was surprised, he said, at the large number of air hitch-hikers. He refused rides to scores.

The young pilot brought with him a letter from the mayor of Los Angeles to Mayor Walker of New York and one to Mayor Hague of Jersey City, Schneider's home town.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH VERDICT RETURNED IN COLLISION CASE

Coroner Discovers Cause; Voller Will Recover

Accidental death was the verdict returned by Coroner R. L. Haines, Jamestown, following his investigation into the tragic auto accident early Saturday afternoon on the Jamestown Pike which claimed the lives of Mrs. Mary Louise Voller, of Chillicothe, and her 3-year-old son, John William.

J. W. Voller, husband of Mrs. Voller, remains in a serious condition at McClellan Hospital but is expected to recover. He sustained a broken left shoulder, broken pelvis, fractured right ribs and abdominal injuries.

The accident occurred when the Voller machine collided head-on with an auto operated by James Stroud, 35, of 440 N. Detroit St., Xenia, who received minor chest injuries.

Mrs. Voller and her youngest son, their necks broken, were dead when they were taken from the wrecked car. Another son, Harold, 6, escaped with minor cuts and bruises, and a colored maid, Marie Pettiford, was injured only slightly. The maid was able to return to her home in Chillicothe Saturday night.

The bodies of Mrs. Voller and her son were taken to the Brough undertaking parlors in Birmingham, where funeral services will be held at the home of her mother, Mrs. Matilda Hamilton, proprietress of the Hamilton Inn in that city, at 2 p. m. Tuesday. The Rev. Earl McKinney, Springfield, former pastor

G. A. R. GATHERS FOR MEETING

CINCINNATI, O., Aug. 25.—Aging members of the Grand Army of the Republic were gathered here today to participate in their sixty-fourth annual encampment.

At the opening of the encampment yesterday, thousands of Cincinnatians witnessed the flag-raising ceremony and the booming of a 21-gun salute to the memory of the "boys" who lost their lives in the Civil War and those who have died since.

Trees were dedicated, flags were presented, medals were bestowed, and many speeches eulogized the "boys," now old and feeble, who gallantly tramped off to war in '61.

Many Negroes dotted the huge crowd which had gathered to pay homage to the men who helped to emancipate them.

The five-day encampment will culminate next Friday with a steamer pilgrimage to the birthplace of General U. S. Grant, at Point Pleasant, Ohio.

CHARLES FRALEY IS SOUGHT; VICTIM IS SEVERELY WOUNDED

John Corrigan Made Target Of Enraged Veteran Sunday

Charles Fraley, 45, of Grape Grove, five miles east of Jamestown, wanted in connection with the shooting at 5 p. m. Sunday of John Corrigan, 46, farm laborer, who is reported in a serious condition at St. Elizabeth Hospital, Dayton, with 300 bird shot imbedded in his body, was the object of an intensive man-hunt conducted by county authorities Sunday night and early Monday.

Corrigan, who resides with his three children, on the farm of William Taylor on the Paulin Road, four and a half miles northeast of Jamestown, was shot twice with a shotgun while standing in his front yard.

Sheriff Ohmer Tate was advised that Fraley drove up in front of Corrigan's home and without alighting from the machine, called the latter out in the yard. Corrigan went to the front gate, about twenty-five feet from the car. Fraley is said to have asked Corrigan for a drink and when the latter replied, "I ain't got any," Fraley is alleged to have declared, "I'll just shoot you then." Whereupon it is claimed he fired twice with the shotgun, the first charge striking Corrigan in the legs and the second in the back as he turned to escape.

Fraley then drove away, the sheriff was told. Corrigan's son notified William Taylor who summoned Dr. R. L. Haines, Jamestown. Dr. Haines ordered Corrigan removed to the Dayton hospital in an ambulance of F. E. Burr, Jamestown funeral director. Dr. Haines announced that about 300 shot Wilkison, shot in the forehead with a bullet from a 45-70 rifle died a short time after the gun battle in St. Luke's Hospital.

The robbers who were the victims of bullets fired by police who arrived on the scene during a pitched battle between the guests and the holdup men, were Angelo Bell, 20, and his brother, Mike, 16, both of Cleveland, according to police. Angelo was shot in the right leg and Mike in the right arm.

DAYLIGHT BANDITS ROB JEWELRY STORE

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 25.—In one of the most daring daylight hold-ups on record here, three armed bandits today entered the Gude jewelry store shortly after the doors were opened, cowed the proprietor and his assistant with drawn guns and made their escape with jewelry worth $2,000 and $300 in cash.

H. W. Montgomery, manager, was removing two trays of rings and cash from the office safe when the trio entered. Montgomery and A. Mallen, the assistant, were held at bay while the bandits looted the safe and tray.

Their getaway was made in an automobile which had been parked nearby.

BLAME GANGSTERS FOR CICERO MURDER

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—Shot through the back of the head and badly beaten, the body of Joseph Terravacca, 44, was found today in front of his home in Cicero, suburban stronghold of the Capone forces.

Although the dead man was known as a butcher, police believe he was involved in a liquor racket and was slain by gangsters who took him for a "ride" and then returned to hurl the body in the street at his home.

The dead man was clothed only in underwear and the rest of his clothes were not found.

PILSUDSKI WILL BE POLISH DICTATOR

WARSAW, Poland, Aug. 25.—The fast growing lineup of European dictators was ready to augment its ranks today with the impressive figure of Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, hitherto Poland's covered mainspring of power, who announced he was ready to cope with all governmental problems following resignation Saturday of Premier Walery Salawek and his cabinet.

Bitter political wrangles are expected when Pilsudski officially announces his leadership. He already has wide opposition since the frank declaration that he reserved for himself decisions in the most important government matters, obviously leaving to the cabinet merely the routine ministerial duties.

were lodged in the man's body but that he would recover unless infection set in.

Corrigan's three children, Francis, 16; Mary, 13 and Cecilia, 11, were at home at the time. One of the children, who was on the front porch when the shooting occurred, was struck on the foot by a stray shot but the injury was not serious.

Sheriff Tate and L. A. Davis, county road patrolman, scoured the countryside Sunday night and until 1 a. m. Monday in a vain search for the Ford sedan in which Fraley drove away.

Earlier in the day Fraley had had an altercation with James Thompson, owner of the house in which Fraley was living. Sheriff Tate and Officer Davis went to Fraley's home about 10 a. m. and accompanied him to Thompson's residence, where Thompson was arrested, brought to Xenia and lodged in the County Jail to await arraignment on a probable charge of pointing firearms or carrying a concealed weapon.

The sheriff said Thompson attempted to draw a .32 caliber revolver as the officers approached but that Davis grabbed his arm before he could remove the weapon from his pocket.

According to a story told the sheriff, when Fraley's wife rented the house from Thompson she misrepresented herself. When Thompson discovered the house had been rented to the Fraleys he objected and had attempted to oust them from the dwelling.

Fraley told the sheriff he was driving along the South Charleston Pike early Sunday and as he went past the home of Roy Jones, he saw Thompson and Jones there together. Jones hailed him and when he stopped Thompson is alleged to have threatened Fraley with his revolver. Jones intervened and held Thompson, giving Fraley an opportunity to drive away, it is said.

Investigation by Sheriff Tate revealed that Fraley later in the day went to a friend's home and purchased a shotgun for $5. It is believed he had been drinking home brew and that he may have been under the influence of liquor when he visited Corrigan's home late in the afternoon and when denied a drink, shot the farmer.

Fraley, according to the sheriff, is a World War veteran and has been the recipient of a soldier's relief for a number of years.

Kills Man Who Eloped And Wed Daughter

Mrs. Elizabeth Attilio, of Philadelphia, shot and killed her newly acquired son-in-law, James Cassidy, 48, when he called at her home to tell her of his elopement with her 18-year-old daughter Rose.

REV. DAVID POWERS GIVES FAREWELL TO HIS CONGREGATION

Urging his hearers to remain true to the goal of a new church edifice, the Rev. David Powers, pastor of St. Brigid Catholic Church for the last six years, delivered his farewell to the congregation at Sunday's masses.

The Rev. Father Powers will begin his pastorate at St. Joseph's Church, Dayton, where he was recently transferred, Thursday, and will be succeeded here by the Rev. Lawrence Wessell, present pastor of St. Jerome Church, California, O., who will greet his new parishioners next Sunday.

It was the Rev. Father Powers who inspired the congregation to the ideal of a new church during his pastorate here and he told his listeners Sunday that they stand committed to that program and should carry it through to a successful conclusion. Under his pastorate the Rev. Father Powers not only purchased a new home for the teaching nuns of the parish and financed elaborate repairs, but established a substantial church building fund part of which has been expended in the removal of the rectory to a new location to make way for the church building.

Because of a diocesan order to delay building programs pending the outcome of the depression period, erection of the church, originally scheduled for the coming fall, will not be started then. Financial statements for the period from January 1 to August 1 were distributed by the Rev. Father Powers at services Sunday, and the report included a farewell message from the pastor who was beloved by his congregation and had a host of friends among people not members of his church.

In his written message and in his farewell talks to the congregation, the retiring pastor thanked his parishioners for their loyal support and credited to a generous and faithful laity the successes that have come under his leadership here.

of the Franklin Presbyterian Church, will officiate. Burial will be made in Woodhill Cemetery at Franklin, in which city the Vollers family resided for a number of years before going to Chillicothe.

Coroner Haines, who investigated the accident, questioned James Stroud, driver of the car which was in the collision with the Vollers auto, and Lawrence Smith and John Haines, state highway department employees, who witnessed the accident. The testimony of Smith and Haines was that Vollers, who was driving, apparently applied the brakes too suddenly as the Stroud machine approached at a rather high rate of speed, causing his machine to skid across the road directly into the Stroud auto.

Although a front tire on the Vollers auto was found to have blown out, it is believed the blow-out resulted from the force of the impact with the Stroud machine and had nothing to do with causing the accident, as was first thought.

The fatal accident occurred two miles east of Xenia, the Vollers being on their way to Miamisburg, where they had planned to spend the week-end with Mrs. Vollers' mother, Mrs. Matilda Hamilton, at the Hamilton Inn.

Mrs. Hamilton came to Xenia Saturday upon being notified of the accident and took the 6-year-old son back to Miamisburg with her.

story that took months to live, months filled with hopes, adventure, suffering, despair and finally perceptible death, mocking the three lone figures from a vast and endless expanse of ice and snow, beckoning to them by one.

The position on the page would have placed the death party at about 117 nautical miles due west of the camp where they eventually perished, their bodies and equipment to be preserved nearly intact for thirty-three long years.

Apparently, within a week after soaring aloft from Danes Island in Spitzbergen, in an oval-shaped swinging gasbag, Andree and his companions landed safely on the icefields and began a 117-mile trek, dragging their huge supply of food and camping equipment after them on sleds.

From deductions of the spot on White Island where Dr. Horn found the bodies, it was assumed the north pole aspirants finally met a body of open water too formidable to be braved in their collapsible boat and realized suddenly that theirs was a question of rescue by friends or death in the far north. They established their camp, ate polar bear meat, and one by one succumbed to cold and starvation. Andree, it appeared, was last to die.

Ridiculed and jeered by a jesting world when they set out on their adventure thirty-three years ago, their bodies will be brought back to receive the homage of a more sympathetic universe.

HEALTHIEST CLUB MEMBERS SELECTED DURING CAMP WEEK

Oscar Fulkerson, Xenia Twp. and Mary Pierce, Bellbrook, were adjudged the healthiest boy and girl respectively, in attendance at the Greene County 4-H Club Camp held at Clifton last week. By winning this honor they have the privilege of representing Greene County 4-H Clubs at the Ohio State Fair this week.

Second honors in the health examination were awarded Joe Wadde, Cedarville, and Irene Harner, Osborn, and third honors went to William Wolf, Xenia Twp., and Elizabeth Anderson, Xenia Twp.

The health examination was conducted by Mrs. Pearl Wittenmyer, county health nurse, assisted by Dr. T. H. Winans, Osborn, Dr. L. L. Taylor, Yellow Springs and Dr. R. H. Grube, Xenia. Each child at the camp was subjected to a complete physical examination and a chart showing the result of the child's examination will be sent to the parents of the children soon.

According to Mrs. Wittenmyer there was a decided improvement over the condition of the health of the children this year than that of last year and this is due she said to the fact that the children have carried out the health habits suggested to them at the club camp last year.

Girl Who Turned Down Stage For Broadcasting Plays Roles On Air

SINCE 1926 ROSALINE GREEN HAS BEEN KNOWN AS THE GIRL WITH "The Perfect Radio Voice"

ROSALINE GREEN

By YANNER ALEXANDER
Central Press Staff Writer
NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—If the chain studios shared the reputed Hollywood attitude of unfriendliness toward contest winners, Rosaline Green would have been either the original WGY Players and a legitimate stock company, all the while keeping up with her classes at college. This experience, and the title, led Lee Schubert to offer her the lead in his production of "Pearl of Great Price," but Rosaline had decided that her true vocation was the creation of dramatic roles for radio presentation and declined with thanks.

Her graduation with honor carried with it a license to teach wherever she chose and, her chosen field not having developed to its present dimensions in 1926, Rosaline let teaching pay her expenses while she took a post-graduate course in dramatics at Columbia University.

Then, while she was with a fashionable school on Riverside Drive, she organized her own group of radio players. She wrote, or adapted, the plays, directed them and acted in the finished product. This course of action inevitably led to a chain contract and the assurance that her eminence would continue, full time.

Her Unique Voice
Edward H. Smith of the old WGY, who is generally given credit as the founder of radio drama, was the undoubted discoverer of Rosaline.

Refused Stage Offer
Before she, or her voice was given the prize at the Radio World's Fair of 1926, the charming Rosaline had served more than two years of apprenticeship with both the original WGY Players and a legitimate stock company, all the while keeping up with her classes at college. This experience, and the title, led Lee Schubert to offer her the lead in his production of "Pearl of Great Price," but Rosaline had decided that her true vocation was the creation of dramatic roles for radio presentation and declined with thanks.

Star Gazing

By RADIE HARRIS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Aug. 19.—Introducing Lucile and Jimmie Gleason's finest attraction of their entire career. Produced Feb. 6, 1908, at Portland, Oregon. Entitled "Russell."

Made a noise like an actor at age of three months. Played title role in "The Heir to the Houras." Was a "howling" success.

Childhood ambition was to be a postman, fireman and policeman, so that he could ride free on street cars. Is no relation to Harry Lauder.

Attended University of California for purpose of winning an L. and S. (Leisure and Sleep) degree. Came to Hollywood to spend Summer with his family. Was offered role in "The Shady Lady." The University of California has been struggling along without him ever since.

Likes Irish wolfhounds, Donald Ogden Stewart, caviar, San Francisco, track meets, Mrs. Irving Berlin, Russian food, Dorothy Parker, intellectual outdoor women, surprising people with presents, and Jimmie Durante.

HATES BASEBALL.

Hates trite phrases, lary performances, picture premieres, living on schedule, the country, baseball, ice water and coconut cake and candy.

Has a bulldog named "Puffing Billy" in honor of the first locomotive ever built. Christened him after sleeping with him in the same room all night.

Draws $10 a week spending money from his weekly salary check. The rest is banked away by his business agent. When he runs low, generally "touches" the "old man," who receives $25.

Only time he ever gets embarrassed is when he talks to Gloria Swanson.

Would like to play "Merton of the Movies" and "Cyrano de Bergerac." And knows he never will.

Has a picture of his grandmother when she played the lead in "Shenandoah" at the age of 15, and an old playbill of his first appearance on the stage with his mother, father, grandmother and grandfather included in the cast, which he would grab first in case of fire in his home.

NO BRIDGE-FIEND

Can't play bridge. Doesn't particularly enjoy dancing. And loathes wisecracking. Is on every hostess' list in Hollywood.

Gets a new expression every day. Current one is describing everyone and everything as "dis-mal."

Inherits all the superstitions of a theatrical family. Lack cats.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

ETERNAL RECOGNITION—Whoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven. But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven.—Matthew 10:32, 33.

ARGENTINA

A former chancellor of the Argentine embassy in Washington predicts at Williamstown that "Argentina will withdraw from the Pan-American union as soon as the new generation gets the reins of government in its hands—and perhaps before." This would be unfortunate; but color is given to the prediction by the recent trend in Argentina's foreign policy. Argentina withdrew from the League of Nations in 1920 and has since refused to reconsider her action, although the league assembly unanimously invited her in 1928 to do so. She has a flair for being a lone row.

When Argentina associated herself with Brazil and Chile to extricate Woodrow Wilson from the mess into which the seizure of Vera Cruz in 1914 had precipitated him, a hope was expressed that she was about to abandon her policy of isolation. This hope appears in the light of subsequent events to have been premature. The reception accorded to Mr. Hoover on his pre-inaugural goodwill tour was nowhere else so reserved as in Argentina. The coolness thus displayed toward the United States is to be explained on more than one ground. Argentina's exports are still chiefly agricultural. They were adversely affected by the tariff of 1922. The predominant strains in the population of Argentina are Spanish and Italian. They have been strengthened in the past three-quarters of a century by some 6,000,000 immigrants, very largely from Italy and Spain. Culturally Anglo-Saxons and the Latin peoples are different.

A third reason for the rift in sentiment between Argentina and the United States is the relatively small part our capital has played in developing the second largest republic in South America. Virtually all of the privately owned railways in Argentina are controlled by British companies. About half of the $3,150,000,000 of foreign capital invested in Argentina in 1928 was British, about a sixth of it was American. Our rivals have thus gained a predominant foothold in Argentine trade, which they are loath to surrender, and which there is evidence they have not hesitated to buttress by anti-American propaganda based on the effects of our tariff and even on racial difference.

The withdrawal of Argentina from the Pan-American union, as a protest against what she is represented to believe is an unnecessarily selfish policy of the United States in Central and South America and the Caribbean, would not benefit her in the slightest. She would merely lose the support of this association of sister republics in restraining the "Colossus of the North." The Pan-American union has done much to promote peace and understanding, arbitration and conciliation, as well as trade, among its members. Above all it has heretofore recognized and proclaimed the solidarity of the republics of the two Americas vis-a-vis the old world. Any defection from its ranks would be regrettable. The defection of a country of 1,150,000 square miles and a population of 11,000,000 enterprising and industrious people would be particularly so.

The WAY of the WORLD

TALK

Somebody has said: "Never shift your mouth into high gear until you are sure your brain is turning over." There is a great deal of shifting the gears into high when the engine isn't really working. Supposing none of us ever said anything until we had something to say, what a silent world it would be.

LEARNING

"For a better understanding of the unfolding life of man we lay this cornerstone." In these words the great archeologist, Breasted, of the University of Chicago, commemorated the beginning of the Oriental Institute, a part of the university. Researches tirelessly carried on by Breasted and others have immensely expanded the knowledge of man through a study of his remote ancestors.

LANGUAGE

John Erskine, educator, author, pianist, tells us "America is the only country left where we teach languages so that no pupil can speak them. It is the only country where you cannot tell by the way a college graduate speaks and writes whether he is educated or not."

Language can be made more than a thing of use. It can be made a thing of beauty. The English language is the finest instrument for the communication of ideas ever devised in the history of the human race. English is richer in words and possibilities than any other tongue.

Frank Collins Spillman, super-salesman, says that most of this thing we call personality is on the tip of the tongue. Know how to speak, and how to use language to make it work for you beautifully and effectively, and walls fall down before you.

SPARE TIME AGAIN

Much has been said in this column about the wise use of spare time that so often makes smooth the road to success. The original sketch of the great dirigible, R-100, which recently broke the record crossing the Atlantic, was made on the back of a menu card while the designer was at a dinner party. Sir Dennis Houston Burney, director of the company which built it, has a mind that works wherever he happens to be.

THINKING ABOUT IT

A man famed for a great achievement was once asked how he has succeeded so well. "By always thinking about it," he replied. Most of us let our minds run along in lazy reverie and fondly imagine we are thinking.

MOVING OUT; FLYING IN

Far-seeing young men, married and looking for a home, may do well to consider property a hundred miles from town. It won't be more than five years before suburbs are a hundred miles away, from which commuters come daily to the city by air. Air transit for the general public is not far distant. And there are some nice building lots—and cheap—only a hundred miles out.

HEALTHIER

Insurance statistics prove that American wage earners are healthier than they were a year ago. Death from tuberculosis has gone from 95 to 100,000 of the population to a little more than 85. The diphtheria death rate has dropped 27 percent and there are fewer deaths from cancer. That's a wonderful record for this fast age in which we live or try to live. Unfortunately deaths from heart trouble, brought on by the strenuous pace of life, still make lots of news.

Yes. Maurice Chevalier is married to Yvonne Valle.

Poetry
Please inform me from what poem was taken the quotation: "Paths of glory lead but to the grave?"
This quotation was taken from Thomas Grey's "Elegy in a Country Church Yard."

On the Air
How many broadcasting stations are there in the United States and how many radio waves are used for broadcasting?
There are 615 licensed broadcasting stations in operation. Ninety radio frequencies are employed by broadcasters in the United States exclusive of the six which are shared with the Canadian government.

Mothers of Presidents
What state is noted as the home of the presidents?
Virginia has furnished the nation eight presidents. Ohio is second with seven.

Antiques
I have some antiques for sale. How can I determine the value of them?
There is no standard scale of values for antiques. Age, period, condition, kind of wood, carving and many other factors have bearing upon their value. Supply and demand also play a leading part in their price and sale. New York City is the leading market, but it would be impossible to have your furniture appraised by a New York dealer unless you shipped it there.

Populous Chinese
How many Chinese are there on earth and when was the last census taken in China?
There are approximately 600,000,000 Chinese on earth. The only reliable statistics ever taken on China's population were compiled in 1402 and 1403 by the emperor. The increase in this one year amounted to 19 per cent.

Coins
What was the highest price ever paid for a rare coin?
A $5 gold piece from the George Alfred Lawrence collection sold at auction in New York City in 1929, brought $7,900. The coin was issued in California in 1849, during the "gold fever" period.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK.—"Some years ago," said The Old Stage Manager, "a fellow came to me who was starving. Kicked out of his room. Feet on the ground, I hooked him up with a road company at $75 a week and sold him a hundred advance. He told me with tears in his eyes he'd never forget it."

"The whirligig of time reversed our positions. He's on the crest of the wave today and I'm in the trough of the sea. Got a job with a Broadway hit that'll keep him well bedded for at least two years. I went back-stage the other night and asked him for $15. Room rent. He turned me down."

I saw that The Old Stage Manager got his fifteen bucks. He told me with tears in his eyes he'd never forget it. As the girl says in the play: "I wonder..."

WHEN BRETHREN MEET
No one should live beyond what he can reasonably expect to borrow. That's the Broadway motto—and in these sad days it's sent most of them scurrying far afield in search of work.

At first, digging deep and finding the last dime gone, they let it be known that they'd keep any honest toll that did not involve too much perspiration. Later, with appetites unsatisfied, they become panic-stricken and less fussy.

Two of The Brethren met last week in an Eighth Avenue Coffee Pot frequented by The Fringe. One of them had landed a job in a nearby power house.

"It's better than nothing," he remarked philosophically. "And you," he added, "how are things rollin' with you?"

"Me?" said the other erstwhile thespian. "Oh, I'm doblin' in brass." By which indirect, elusive and subtle symbolism he conveyed the intelligence that he was polishing up, as porter, in an adjacent side-wheel hostelry.

IT WON'T BE LONG NOW!

AFTER 37 YEARS IN PUBLIC LIFE SENATOR HEFLIN FACES HANDICAP NOW THAT PARTY DISOWNS HIM

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Senator J. Thomas Hefflin of Alabama—better known as plain Tom—also occasionally referred to as Cotton Tom, obviously on account of his home state's most important agricultural product—and by some nicknamed Tomtom, from a fancied resemblance of his oratory to the sound of the primitive musical instrument so called.

Well, anyway, Marse Tom, now in his 52nd year, has held elective office, of one sort or another, almost uninterruptedly since he was not quite 24.

It is true enough that it is no trick for a Democrat, once nominated, to win in Alabama, but it is just as hard to be nominated there as it is to be elected in other parts of the country, where they have inter-party fights.

TOMTOM APPEARS never to have slipped up on a nomination he wanted until this year.

Beginning as mayor of his home town of Lafayette, his political successes accumulated so fast that frequently his jobs overlapped, and he had to resign in the midst of a term, in order to avail himself of higher honors which had ripened for him even sooner than he himself had expected.

Appointive posts, which a man sometimes is boosted into, never seem to have appealed to Cotton Tom.

The kind he evidently preferred (and attained, with such amazing regularity) have been of the type within the gift, directly, of the people—the sort that the aspirant acquires, if at all, by virtue of his own profound understanding of popular psychology.

AFTER NEARLY four decades of this sort of thing, without a setback, it must give Tomtom a decidedly eerie feeling to find himself thrown bodily right out of the Alabama Democratic organization—at almost the end of his current senate term, too—and forced to run for re-election as an independent.

What happened has been told already. Tom bolted Al Smith in 1928. Accordingly, this time the Alabama Democratic central committee ruled that he no longer is a Democrat and barred him from the party's ticket, for renomination senatorially. John T. Bankhead, brother of Representative William B. Bankhead, of Jasper (Ala.), and a son of John H. Bankhead, whom Tomtom succeeded in the senate, got the nomination.

THIS IS WHY, perforce, Senator Hefflin is making an independent run—as a Jeffersonian Democrat, he terms himself, to distinguish him from the official Democrat, Candidate Bankhead.

A real scrap at the polls in November, will be a new thing for Alabama.

Ordinarily, as previously remarked, the excitement is all over as soon as the Democrats have made their nominations; the other folk usually are too weak even to put up a ticket.

Candidate Bankhead will know there has been a fight in the present instance, however.

TOMTOM HEFLIN is a peculiar character—a person of strong prejudices and vehement language. People up in New England, in the middle Atlantic, the central, the lake, the corn belt and the plateau states and out on the Pacific coast read about the speeches he makes in the senate and say he simply is impossible—but they forget that it is Alabama he is making those speeches for, and that Alabama's taste in speeches may be different from theirs.

True, it is quite likely there are Alabamians whom Tom humiliates, but Tom is addressing the big bulk of them. As well as I can figure it, they would not have kept on electing him to the legislature, the house of representatives, the senate and other offices for 37 years unless he had their mass likes and dislikes estimated accurately.

There is no denying that an independent candidate is at considerable disadvantage.

The lack of a party machine is an embarrassment. Generally speaking, this is not a good year for 1928's Al Smith bolters, either.

The North Carolina Democrats took Senator Simmons for a ride because he turned Hoovercrat. They turned him down for a renomination—though he was the oldest member of the United States senate.

On the other hand, Senators Glass of Virginia and Sheppard of Texas, whom the Hoovercrats tried to punish for supporting Al, were gloriously vindicated, both being renominated by big majorities.

Furthermore, Senator Hugo L. Black, Tomtom's own Alabama colleague, passed coldly by on the other side of the street, declining to lend any aid to Tomtom's independent campaign, when Tomtom made overtures to him—although both were endorsed by the Ku Klux Klan the last time they were candidates.

These were unfavorable symptoms for Senator Hefflin.

Yet the nominating primary was not so unfavorable to him.

Tomtom's primary fix was not quite like Senator Simmons'—in North Carolina.

Senator Simmons was on the ticket and the North Carolina Democratic voters themselves rejected his candidacy—which ended the matter. Tomtom, not being on the Alabama ticket, is in a position to say that the Democratic rank and file wanted him and would have chosen him if the little group on the central committee had let them.

He therefore urged his friends to boycott the primary—in order to feel free to vote for him as an independent.

If the primary vote had been a whopper, the inference would have been that his friends were few—but it was not a whopper; it was a very small vote. Thus Tom is entitled to trust that a lot of folk are lying low—to plunk for him in November.

To summarize: Senator Hefflin is a strong candidate—but handicapped. Can he overcome his handicap?

John T. Bankhead has sought nomination before and always was beaten until his most formidable opponent was hogtied—whence it seems fair to guess that he is not so strong. Progressives also find fault with him. But he is at a technical advantage. Will it avail him?

And any election in which the perpetration or elimination of Tomtom Hefflin is the chief issue cannot but be of capital interest to the whole country.

Easy Way to Wash Windows
The easiest way is the best, as far as washing windows is concerned. In order to keep the glass panes clean and shining, household experts recommend a solution made by adding a little kerosene to a thick soap paste. This should be applied to the windows with a clean cloth or sponge and then rinsed away with clear, hot water. A small rubber hose is convenient for rinsing the exterior.

Squeegees help to dry the windows and to prevent squeaking. The long-haired variety saves unnecessary bending and reaching. To add a final polish to the windows rub them thoroughly with old newspapers or a clean piece of chamol.

In order to keep the glass panes clean and shining, household experts recommend a solution made by adding a little kerosene to a thick soap paste. This should be applied to the windows with a clean cloth or sponge and then rinsed away with clear, hot water. A small rubber hose is convenient for rinsing the exterior.

Squeegees help to dry the windows and to prevent squeaking. The long-haired variety saves unnecessary bending and reaching. To add a final polish to the windows rub them thoroughly with old newspapers or a clean piece of chamol.

Make Child Immune From Ills

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

It won't be long now. The golden summer days are going past. They are getting shorter. Every now and then a cool morning blows across your face. There is a hint of fall in the air.

And the play-time days for the children are going past, too. The days of running and romping in the sunshine. The schoolroom looms ahead for them, poor straits. They must go back and sit straight and not whisper and do all the things it is unnatural for them to do. They must do so in order, to use the definition of education given by a great teacher, that "each individual may be inducted into the general experience of the race."

Well, there is no help for it—for their future happiness at least, it is best.

Is there anything to be done to prepare them physically so the ordeal will be a little easier on them?

Of course in many ways children stand ordeals better than we do. They have resiliency and their strong healthy young bodies bound back to renewed vigor in no time.

But in one respect they are weaker than adults are. They are more susceptible to certain things. Principally to infections and infectious diseases.

You see we old people have lived long enough in the world so that we have acquired an immunity to nearly all the contagious diseases.

You seldom hear of a person over 25 years of age catching scarlet fever or measles or whooping cough or chickenpox or diphtheria. Why is this? Because all these diseases are spread by contact, and by the time a person has lived to the age of 25 or 30 he has been in contact with all these diseases and has developed an immunity.

Sometimes you develop an immunity to disease by actually having an attack of it. When the germ which causes it gets into your body your blood and other tissue juices produce antibodies to the poison of the germ. Then they produce an active poison against the germ which kills it off.

Ever after, whenever you come in contact with that germ, your blood and body juices have been sensitized so that they produce the antibodies and poisons for it immediately. You do not have a second attack. Your body throws off the poison and kills the germ before you have a chance to get sick.

But you do not always have to have a disease in order to acquire an immunity to it. If you meet enough people, get into crowded theaters and street cars where everyone breathes the same air, you are bound to take in a few germs from other people. There may be old, weak germs which your body juices can neutralize and kill off very easily. Even so, you acquire what is called "contact immunity."

You do not actually have the disease—say it is diphtheria against which most people acquire contact immunity, but you are protected from it for the rest of your life.

It takes time to do this. You have to live some years in the world.

Children have very little of this contact immunity. They have had had enough contacts with people. And when they are crowded in a schoolroom they are liable to get a good many. Mind you, I think it is a good thing. To keep them away from crowds and from their fellows is to expose them to the same dangers later in life.

But is there any way to protect them from the worst of the dangers of school contacts? From the most serious contagious diseases they can have?

Yes there is. And the carrying out of these procedures is the most important thing that you can do to prepare your child for school. I will describe the essential ones in the following articles this week.

Girl Does Not Like Kisses

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"MY DEAR MISS LEE: I am a daily reader of your column and enjoy it very much. I have been going with a girl a little more than a year my junior. She is 16 and I 17. I have been going with her about three months. I care a great deal for her and she says she likes me pretty well. However, she has never been kissed, and says that she is not going to let a boy kiss her until both are sure that they care a lot for each other.

"In my case she says she does not think I care enough for her, but even though I tell her I care an awful lot for her, she does not think I am sincere. How can I show her that I do care for her? I have not dated another girl since I have been going with her.

"She is the first girl that I have been unable to kiss in at least three dates. I would even like to wager that George, Jr., would be unable to kiss her in half a dozen dates. Of course I could kiss her against her will, but I made her a promise that I would not do that. We both agree that there is nothing wrong in necking if both the boy and girl care enough.

"Dear Miss Lee, I care more for her than for all the other girls I have ever gone with, but together, and I believe that I will never know that she really cares for me until she lets me kiss her. Even though she refuses, I greatly admire her spirit in the matter. Your advice would be greatly appreciated. Miss Lee.

"A PERPLEXED LOVER."
Your sentence, "I greatly admire her spirit," explains her attraction for you. She has spirit, that girl and I think it is too bad for you to try to break it down. If she gives in, ten to one you won't care for her nearly as much.

I admire her, just as you do. When she DOES kiss a fellow, he will know she really cares for him and her kisses will be worth having. Respect her wishes, son. She wouldn't go with you exclusively if she didn't like you.

PERPLEXED JOAN: You say you do not have many boy friends and then tell of two who like you. If the second boy has definitely broken with his girl it would be all right to continue to go with him, but don't take him from her. It wouldn't be fair.

POOR POLLY: Why don't you speak to the boy as long as you know one another, and smile at him? It is your place to speak first, you know. You will get over your bashfulness as you grow older, and, in the meantime, try to think that you make others feel uncomfortable when you act shy, and try to set them at ease. This attitude will, in time, I think, lead you to forget yourself and cease to be bashful.

Get Permanent Before Bleaching

By GLADYS GLAD

WITH THE advent of summer, permanent waves become as numerous as the waves of the sea. Since hats are worn less frequently during this season, the coiffure must always look presentable.

The average woman seems to think that a permanent wave will make her hair beautiful, regardless of its condition of health. This is not true. In fact, if the hair is in a poor condition, the permanent waving process may make it worse. See that your hair is gloriously healthy before you go for your permanent wave.

It is most difficult to administer a satisfactory permanent wave over hair that has been bleached or dyed. If you intend to get a permanent wave, and also wish to change the color of your hair, by means of obtaining the wave before you apply any dyes or bleaches to the hair.

Dyes and bleaches tend to remove the natural oil from the hair. As the permanent waving process is also drying to the hair, the combination may result in making your hair unpleasantly harsh, dry

Ankeney Pitches Merchants To 3-0 Victory

PERMITS WHITE SOX BUT THREE HITS IN SUNDAY GAME HERE

Merchants Hit Hard But Old Master Scatters Them

Jasper Ankeney, pride of Zimmerman, held the Dayton White Sox in check throughout Sunday afternoon's renewal of a scheduled three-game series with this colored nine, while his teammates were rather lucky to push across three counters, the Xenia Merchants winning 3 to 0, to make it two straight and a clean sweep of the abbreviated series.

Xenia's three runs, one of which was unearned, came in the second, fifth and seventh innings. The first was scored without the aid of a hit. Cyphers reached first on an error, took second as Weller grounded out, advancing both runners and when Ruse grounded to the shortstop, the Dayton first baseman dropped Warner's throw letting in Weller with a run.

In the fifth Durnbaugh led off with a triple over Mitchell's head in deep right. Moore walked and stole second and when Mendenhall beat out a hit toward second, Durnbaugh crossed the rubber. Merchants tabbed their final run in the seventh on successive singles by Durnbaugh, Mendenhall and Cyphers.

Ankeney, Merchants hurler, curve-balled the visitors into a state of helplessness and allowed five hits besides fanning four batters and exhibiting perfect control. Only one White Sox player saw third base and this was in the ninth with two down. Pate tripled to center. Durnbaugh got his gloved hand on the ball but could not hold it. Pate never saw home plate, however, as Edwards bounced to third and was tossed out, preserving Ankeney's shutout game.

Ankeney was opposed on the mound by that aged southpaw, Perkins, who was hit safely in every inning but the second, but was supreme in the pinches. Off his delivery the Merchants gathered twelve hits and they had just that many runners left on the paths. Perkins was pretty wild. Being a left-hander he walked three batters and hit another.

Durnbaugh's hitting and fielding were the high spots of the contest. The slugging center-fielder struck out his first time at bat, then hit a triple and two singles on his other three trips to the plate. In the sixth he robbed Fox of an extra base hit with a brilliant catch and easily doubled a runner off second. The White Sox also made one double-killing in the eighth when Fields made a difficult catch of Johnson's fly in short right and nipped Ankeney, who had singled before he could return to first base.

Mike Weller laced out two hits and walked once and Allan Mendenhall, playing third base, beat out two infield hits. Pate led the Dayton hitting with a triple and single.

Ankeney had the boys hitting little rollers or popflies all afternoon. The Merchant outfielders had only two putouts, whereas Ankeney himself had seven assists and one put-out. He fielded his position wonderfully well.

Next Sunday the Merchants will resume another pending series with the Lincoln Cubs, another Dayton colored nine, and are counting on making it two straight over the Cubs.

IDLE HOUR CLUB BEATS DAYTON TEAM 12 TO 7 IN SUNDAY CONTEST

Although hits were equally divided, the Idle Hour Club softballers put their fourteen bingles to more intelligent use and contrived to spank the Dayton Yeoman's nine, 12 to 7 in a free-hitting game Sunday afternoon on the Mulberry St. diamond here.

Hargrave pitched the first three innings for the winners Bradshaw hurled the last six, being the victim of a five-run Dayton rally in the first half of the ninth round. By that time, however, the Xenia boys had the contest safely tucked away.

SPLASH! She Swims to Conquer

By Eleanore Burnett

READ THIS FIRST:

Kitty Wilmet, secretary to Elery Goss, assists Gordon Platt, Goss' confidential man, with whom she is daily falling in love, in running down a "leak" in the office; Atlee Goss' chief clerk, asks her to marry him. She does not accept. After meeting Boss Kelliher at a party given by Hilda, 'phone operator, she is later accosted by him, and he asks her to work for him at a thousand dollars a month.

Next day, in the East Side Natatorium, she defeats a professional swimmer in an impromptu race. She is shocked when Platt tells her a gambler, Tom Gayle, won a five thousand dollar bet on her, and indignantly rejects the money Gayle tried to pay as her share. She tells Platt about Kelliher's offer; Platt thinks it indicates Kelliher's connection with the leak.

Determined to be more active in helping Gordon, although not yet ready to confess Atlee's actions or knowledge of Kelliher, Kitty asks help of Hilda's Spike Harden, through whom she gets the idea of employing a private detective agency, where she is shocked to find Gayle, the gambler who bet on her, in charge. But she is happy to learn that Platt returned his money; and falls asleep that night dreaming of the kiss Platt never tried to give her.

Her home-town lover, John Spurgeon, arrives unexpectedly in New York; Kitty stages a party for him with friends; she sees Platt, who cuts her dead.

Tormented by jealousy she speaks to Platt as she dances by him; he denies his own name.

She refuses a proposition from John. Next day Platt tells her he was doing secret work and did not want the suspect to know his name; Kitty hears for the first time of Gila Mine stock.

Taking impromptu dictation from Goss, she lays a plan to foil the information thief. She learns John Spurgeon is investing in Gila Mine stock, which she knows is to drop.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 27

Kitty walked her bedroom floor in an agony of indecision. She couldn't let John continue in the ownership of stock she knew would drop with a dull sickening thud, and thus lose all he had. She couldn't tell him to sell it before it fell without telling him how she knew; and Mr. Goss had told her she must tell no one, and had added that Gordon Platt said she was to be trusted. And if her false notes were responsible she still more couldn't let John lose!

Her first impulse was to lay her difficulties before Gordon. Some obscure feeling of modesty and fear of rousing more jealousy of John restrained her. She wanted Gordon to be a little jealous—what girl does not? But Kitty was essentially honest and frank. She knew, now, that Gordon had only to ask her and she would say "yes!" If she went to him with John's troubles, might he not think she was unduly interested in John?

Her thoughts turned to Sally, big, beautiful Sally, who never had any troubles, who looked at the world with calm, unfrightened eyes. Impulsively she called a taxi and flew to the big girl she loved and trusted.

"So glad to see you!" cried Sally. "It's been a long time—'Why you see me every day!' protested Kitty.

"Oh, in the office we are all just cogs in the machine! I mean, long since I had seen you here—" Sally sighed.

"Where's Baby?" asked Kitty. To her amazement Sally turned a worried face to her, the tears standing in her eyes. "I don't know!" she whispered. "I don't know!"

"You don't know! Is she lost or anything?" Sally nodded, miserably. "I hate to say so, but I'm afraid she's in trouble. She won't tell me where she goes or whom she goes with. She stays out to outrageous hours. She has mysterious telephone calls. And—"

"Yes?" encouraged Kitty. "Oh, it was despicable, but I asked Bert and Joe and they followed her one night, and she met some one we don't know, and that night she didn't get home until five in the morning!" cried Sally. Kitty comforted her as well as she could, making a mental resolve to have a heart to heart talk with Baby. But in the face of Sally's anxiety she couldn't tell her of her own perturbation. Even if Sally had not had troubles of her own, Kitty asked herself how she could have told without breaking Mr. Goss' confidence?

Then whom could she tell? To let John Spurgeon lose—impossible. To break faith with Mr. Goss and her lover—even more impossible. To—

The door bell rang. Kitty answered it for Sally, and held out a friendly hand to welcome Betty Hemming. Suddenly she saw light; perhaps she could steer Betty right without telling him anything. Perhaps—

"I like your friend Spurgeon!" cried Betty as she came in. "Going to make a little money for him?" "How?" asked Kitty. "Good of you, if you can!"

"Bought a hundred Gila Mine for him on a twenty point margin!" answered Betty. "Sure to go up fifteen or twenty points!"

"How can you be sure?" asked Kitty, knowing he was mistaken. "That's my business—being sure!" laughed Betty.

"But suppose, suppose you are mistaken?" breathed Kitty. He must have seen her false notes! Who could have read them?

"But I'm not! Why your own boss is behind it! Every one in the street knows he's all set to make a killing in that stock. It's been bought right and left. It's up half a point tonight."

Kitty did not dare answer. Betty Hemming was clever but he had been taken in—and by her false notes. He would guess she knew something, if she said much about it. There was no help here—"Oh, what shall I do? I can't be the cause of his loss! It's not fair! It's not right! His mother's eyes—our long friendship—if I only had some money! If I only—"

"If you've got cash for margin, yes. Otherwise, no!" answered Betty. "Why?"

"A fortune teller gave me a tip," she answered in a flat voice. That was no good, then. She had to have money, to keep John from losing money. How get it? Kelliher? Out of the question. Borrow? From whom? Gordon was the only man she knew who might have a few thousands idle. She could not borrow from her lover—even a lover who had not spoken—to save a lover who had! Every instinct in her was against it.

How, how, how make money? Baby drifted slowly in and Kitty had to give over her speculations. Baby looked ill and worn. Something was evidently radically wrong. Her eyes lacked lustre, her face was pale and her hands trembled.

"Kitty, you are a sight for sore eyes. I like your country town man friend. But he's a lamb among wolves!" remarked Baby.

"Baby knew. It was truer than unexpectedly, Baby pulled her to the tiny front room.

"Want a word with you!" she said. When they were alone she asked eagerly. "Have you seen Atlee lately?"

"Every day, at the office," answered Kitty. "No, no! I don't mean that! I mean—out anywhere."

"No," answered Kitty. Baby's face fell. She turned away.

"Baby, what's the trouble?" demanded Kitty. "You are worrying Sally. You look ill. Are you—are you—"

Baby's eyes flashed. She drew herself up proudly.

"I am not accountable for my actions to any one!" she declared. "Are you sure you haven't seen Atlee?"

Kitty had an inspiration. "No, but I'm going to!" she cried. "I'm going to tell him that you are in trouble. I'm going to tell him where you go, when you meet that you don't get home until morning, that Sally is sick because her small sister is making a fool of herself. Maybe Atlee can stop it!"

Baby threw herself on Kitty, holding tight. "No, no!" she cried. "You mustn't! Oh, Kitty, you mustn't! You mustn't spill the beans, that way—promise me, promise me!"

Kitty stroked her hands, trying to quiet her. "If I don't, will you behave? Will you stop worrying

Sally? Will you snap out of this disipation?"

"It isn't what you think!" moaned Baby. "But—yes, I'll be good. Only promise me you won't tell Atlee!"

Kitty wondered. "But you and Atlee both said you were nothing to each other!" she protested. "Why do you care so much?"

"But Baby did not answer. And Kitty had another anxiety to add to those which already possessed her.

In the cab going home that night she said:—"Fatty, how long will it be before John's stock goes up and makes him some money?"

"Ought to be tomorrow—maybe the next day or the day after. We look for it to be all over by the 17th or 18th. It's scheduled, in private circles, to begin to sky rocket on the 15th."

Kitty said no more. Something in the sentence struck a familiar chord in her mind; something sounded as if she ought to know, to understand that which was not plain.

She said good night to Fatty and went to bed. Whatever his words had touched in her memory was elusive. She went over his answer word by word. "Seventeenth—eighteenth—sky rocket on the fifteenth—fifteenth—"

Suddenly she gasped. "The interstate annual swim—Columbia Natatorium—the fifteenth! Mr. Gayle said a pot of money was to be made by a dark horse! That's the way to help John!"

Distaste for professional swimming for herself, disapproval of betting on herself, fear of Gordon's frown—she weighed them all. Yet John, about to be ruined, must be saved. Far better swim as a professional and make enough money to sell the same amount of stock John had bought, and thus save him, than to keep her ideals of swimming and amateurism.

"I'll go to Mr. Gayle tomorrow!" she resolved. "He'll know how to help me—"

Then she cried herself to sleep. In helpless fear lest Gordon attend the interstate annual and see her as a professional swimmer.

WILL HOLD PAGEANT FOR DEDICATION OF MEMORIAL TRAIL

O. K. Reams of Zanesfield, a member of the Ohio Revolutionary Memorial Committee, was selected Friday to direct the pageant which will be a part of the dedicatory exercises to be held October 9 and 10 in Springfield.

At this time the old trails system over Western Ohio will be formally dedicated by Governor Myers, V. Cooper of Ohio, starting at Cincinnati, and culminating October 9 and 10 in a two day celebration at Springfield, Ohio, where the battle of Piqua will be commemorated in a pageant with a review of state troops by the governor, sham battle and a number of other events of equal interest plans for which have not been definitely worked out.

Mr. Reams for many years has directed the Zanesfield pageant which has proved to be a great success, both from an historical and scenic nature.

The Sesqui-Centennial Committee of Springfield is working in co-operation with the Ohio Revolutionary Memorial Commission, and the tentative program worked out Friday is subject to the approval of the body. Mr. Reams is, however, a member of the commission together with A. D. Hosterman and Senator Kuhns from Dayton.

LIVESTOCK TRUCKING ON THE INCREASE

At two terminal markets, Indianapolis and Sioux City, the receipts of hogs by truck for the year 1929 totaled 63 and 64 per cent, respectively. These two markets have grown by leaps and bounds as far as hog receipts are concerned. Ten years ago Indianapolis received 27 per cent of the total hog receipts by truck or wagon while Sioux City received only 6 per cent.

The percentage of total truck receipts at all of the important Ohio markets continues to grow. Thirty-two per cent of the hog receipts at Cincinnati and eighteen per cent at Cleveland were received by truck during 1929, according to G. F. Henning of the Rural Economics Department of the Ohio Experiment Station. The first six months of 1930 indicate that the truck receipts will again show an increase over 1929. Most of the hogs (around 85 per cent) came to Cleveland from within a radius of seventy miles or less, and 92 per cent at Cincinnati came from systems in others. With the continued development of good roads, and more farmer-owned trucks, all indications point toward still further increased receipts by the traveled, but it is seen from the above figures that the bulk of the livestock is coming from nearby farms and only a relatively small percentage is trucked 100 miles or more. Even at some of our western markets, particularly Chicago, East St. Louis, and Peoria, investigation has shown that very few animals are trucked over 100 miles. It may be possible within the next few years for more and more of the livestock to be trucked from seventy-five to one hundred miles, which will still further increase the total truck receipts.

One of the important factors which has permitted trucking to increase rapidly has been the development of good roads. Another factor influencing the use of the truck has been that of convenience. The truck also gives the livestock producer more flexibility, for he can market his livestock any day he chooses.

Many farmers believe that animals shrink less when trucked. This is a debatable point and, to date, not enough information is available would seem to indicate that there is very little difference. Livestock trucking is changing living systems of livestock marketing in some areas and modifying the systems in others. With the continued development of good roads, and more farmer-owned trucks, all indications point toward still further increased receipts by the traveled, but it is seen from the

The Theater

Beautiful girls can't act. Perfect beauty is a handicap. The emotional woman with striking features is many times the better actress on the screen!

So says Cecil B. DeMille, veteran director, in the current Photoplay. I have never selected beautiful women for the leading roles in any of my pictures," he says.

And if that means that such fascinating figures as Gloria Swanson, Bebe Daniels, Leatrice Joy, Jetta

DEPENDABLE MERCHANDISE

And What It Means

IF YOU WERE CRITICALLY ILL and needed the attention of a specialist how would you go about your selection of the man to minister to your needs? Would you look over the list of available specialists, considering those known to be the most reliable in their particular line, and then select some unknown because you were told that he might be "just as good" as the dependable physician?

OR WOULD YOU GO DIRECT to the man who had proven himself in previous cases to be the most expert in his line? Most assuredly you would follow the latter method.

BUYING MERCHANDISE over the counter is no different than buying the services of an expert physician. When a person lays down cold cash for a piece of merchandise, whether it be a pound of coffee or a fur coat, he has the right to demand that he get full value for his money. He should insist that the merchandise be the best that is available at that particular price. When some one tells you that a product is "just as good" as a piece of dependable merchandise even though it sells at a lower price, you can reliably make up your mind that there is some particular reason why this particular product is being sold so cheaply.

NATIONALLY ADVERTISED MERCHANDISE which has proved its dependability over a period of years can be purchased across the counters of your Independent Merchants. It is to the merchant's advantage to offer these products for sale, for their very dependability insures satisfaction, and satisfaction creates good will and makes for better trade and increased business. Your Independent Merchant who carries these nationally advertised brands will not try to foist something that is "just as good" off on you in lieu of a standard product.

WHENEVER YOU SEE A PRIVATE BRAND made for certain merchandising institutions and offered at a lower price than a standard brand, ask yourself the all important question, "Shall I buy something that I know is dependable, or shall I take a chance?" You have a right to insist upon the best.
